DEMOCRATS ENRAGED BY 'SMEAR' CAMPAIGN

Vote Bitterness to Haunt Nixon

By RALPH HARRIS

NEW YORK (Reuter)—One of the few clear results of the most expensive and bombastic off-year election campaign in American history is a deep-running bitterness that will make it harder than ever for President Nixon to govern his divided nation.

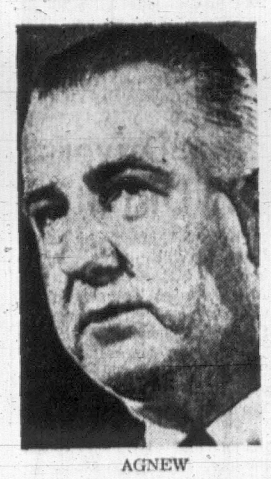

Never before in modern times had a president followed such a hard line against his political opponents in an election in which the White House was not at stake—and never had a president enraged them as he did in the last few months.

The returns from Tuesday's election indicate that, while Nixon may have achieved the "ideological" Senate victory he was after, he faces even more trouble from a Democrat-controlled Congress expected to become more volatile and defiant as 1972 draws near.

The election results encouraged Democrats to believe that the president, who won the White House with only 43 per cent of the popular vote in 1968, would be highly vulnerable in 1972, especially if the inflationary economy does not improve.

MONEY FACTOR PREVAILS

The initial impression here was that the electorate was more interested in the status of its pocketbook than in the law-and-order issue which Nixon and Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew hammered home over and over during the campaign.

AGNEW
. . . legacy of rancor

The failure of the Republicans to win control of the upper house was good news for potential Democratic presidential candidates who won Senate seats with impressive majorities.

Although some big-name Democrats were victims of the president's onslaught, others will wield considerable influence in the Senate as they prepare for their march to the White House in two years' time.

The Democratic hopefuls include former vice-president Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who came back to win a Senate seat after two years in the political wilderness following his defeat by Nixon in the 1968 election, and Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, viewed as the leading contender for the party's presidential nomination in 1972. Muskie won re-election with ease.

KENNEDY WINS EASILY

Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who says he won't seek the 1972 Democratic nomination, is nevertheless a possible draft candidate following a blockbuster re-election victory in Massachusetts.

Although far short of the 74.3 per cent he got in 1964, his 60-plus per cent of Tuesday's vote seemed to prove that last year's Mary Jo Kopechne tragedy has been forgotten or forgiven in Massachusetts.

These three men will constitute a powerful force on Capitol Hill, leading some observers to wonder just how effective the "Nixon-look" Senate will be.

MUSKIE
. . . may battle Nixon

Republican leaders felt that, even if they failed to take numerical control of the Senate by knocking off two or three so-called "radical-liberals" and forging an alliance with disenchanted Democratic conservatives they could swing the balance of Senate power in Nixon's favor.

RISKED PRESTIGE

Nixon risked his personal prestige in a massive effort to break Democratic control of the Senate, and the outlook is for continued frustration for the Republican White House despite the strengthening of the conservatives' voice.

One major success the president chalked up was the defeat of liberal Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee, where the Republicans' southern strategy for the presidential election in 1972 met its first practical test.

Gore's defeat encouraged the Republicans to believe they could forge a coalition with southern Democrats who normally would support Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

But the southern strategy failed elsewhere in the South, where Nixon's strenuous campaign failed to produce results.

He made an all-out effort on behalf of senatorial candidates William Cramer in Florida and George Bush in Texas, but both went down to defeat.

'Yellow Sub' Joins The Navy

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — Canada's navy Tuesday became the first in the world to acquire a submersible that allows divers to work at depths up to 1,000 feet.

In a ceremony aboard the destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie, Rear-Admiral Richard Leir, maritime commander Pacific, dedicated the midget submarine, known officially as SLD-1 (submersible diver lockout) but already dubbed The Yellow Submarine by Leir and his naval associates.

His wife cracked the customary bottle of champagne on the vessel, which stood on an adjacent barge. Her six-man crew headed by Lieut. Barry Ridgewell, stood at attention.

WATCHING PROGRAM

Ridgewell said France is in the process of manufacturing a similar deep-water submersible and the United States and Britain are keeping a close eye on the Canadian navy's newest program.

Built at a cost of $750,000 by International Hydronamics of North Vancouver, the SDL-1, with her unique lockout facilities, will allow divers to leave the vessel and operate at a depth of 1,000 feet. Equipped with external manipulators that can carry out a number of functions, she is operational at a depth of 2,000 feet.

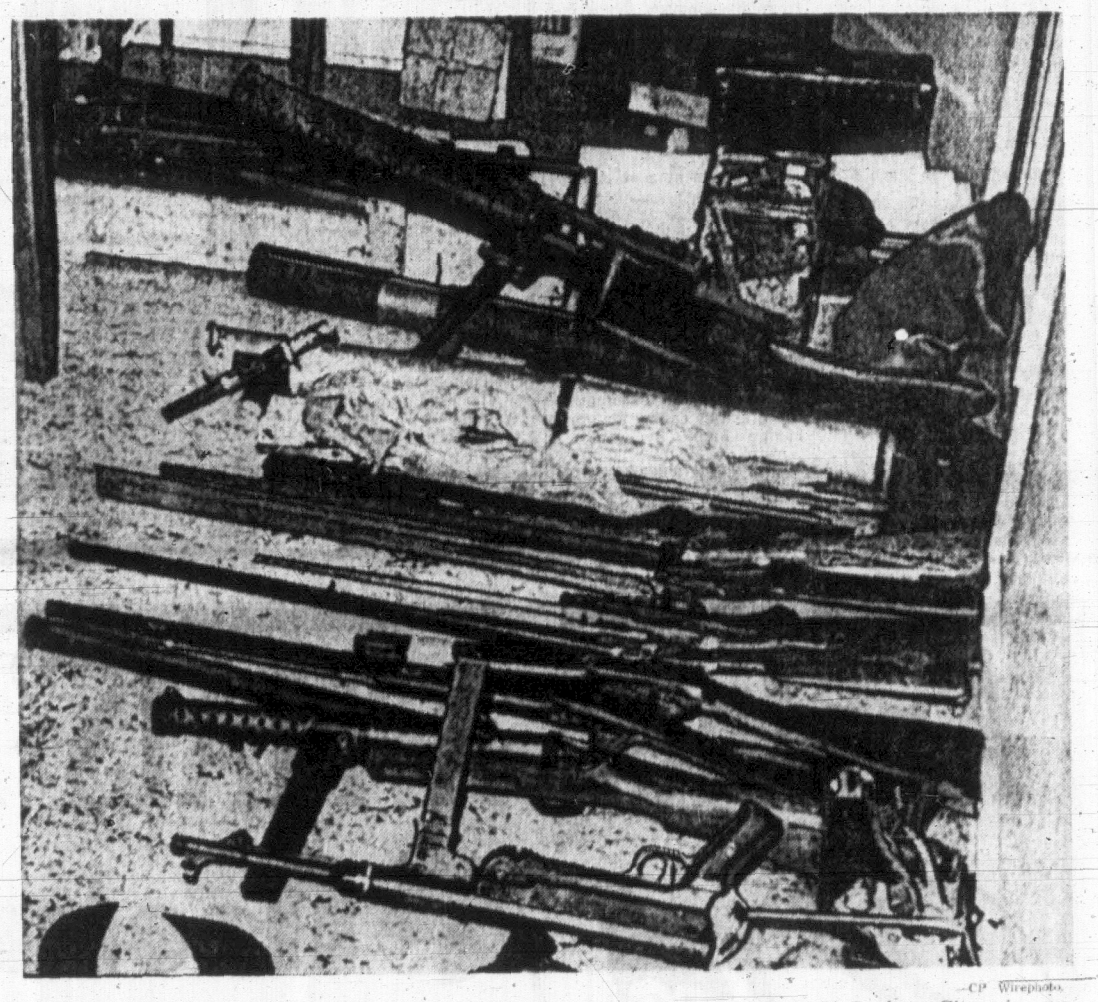

Although normal dives will range between six to eight hours, she is capable of sustaining life aboard for a period of at least 200 hours.

PROTECT SHELF

Leir said the Canadian forces' interest in submersibles is in line with the federal government's determination to protect Canada's sovereignty of her adjacent waters and, particularly, her Continental Shelf.

HIDDEN ARSENAL of machine-guns, revolvers, rifles, dynamite and a bazooka is found by police Tuesday near St. Germain de Kamouraska, about 100 miles northeast of Quebec City, in an abandoned mineral water plant. It was not known if the weapons were hidden by FLQ members.

Police Find Arms Cache; FLQ Suspects Arrested

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Police say they have destroyed a cell of the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec and, in a second raid, Quebec police netted a large cache of weapons.

A newspaper reports that six young people ranging in age from 18 to 23 have been arrested and probably will be charged within two days.

The group, described by one informant as a "communication cell" of the FLQ, is not believed to be connected with the kidnapping of British trade official James Cross and murder of Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

In the arms raid police and soldiers, acting on an anonymous tip, found the weapons in an abandoned mineral water plant on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, northeast of Quebec City.

The arsenal included 20 revolvers, 20 rifles and shotguns, three machine guns, a bazooka, munitions of all kinds and dynamite.

Police said the arsenal was not necessarily a terrorist cache, but might have been assembled by a collector. In addition to modern weapons, it contained helmets and

NOT RUNNING, SAYS KENNEDY

BOSTON (CP) — Senator Edward Kennedy said today he is "committed to service in the U.S. Senate" and flatly rejected the possibility of accepting a Democratic draft for the 1972 presidential race. In a brief victory speech he said:

"I have committed myself to the people of Massachusetts."

Democrats Hold Senate, House

Times News Services

Washington — The Democrats held to their numerical domination of both the Senate and House of Representatives for the ninth consecutive election in the United States Tuesday.

They also wrested a majority of state governonships from Republicans.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, speaking early today for President Nixon, who campaigned more than any previous president in a mid-term election, claimed Nixon "will have a working majority in the Senate," despite the Democrat gains.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic national chairman, countered that "the president and vice-president would be hard put to call this anything but a Republican defeat."

The thrust of the administration's argument was that with the support of conservative southern Democrats and the Conservative party's James Buckley, elected by traditionally-liberal New York, Nixon would have a freer hand in foreign and defence policy.

It appeared the traditional economic appeals of the Democrats worked well against the strong "law-and-order" campaign which Nixon and Agnew waged on an unprecedented level for an off-term election.

Two influential Democrats in the Senate, Albert Gore in Tennessee and Joseph Tydings of Maryland, were defeated. But the Democrats had three of their biggest names back in the Senate and well in contention for the 1972 presidential nomination — Hubert Humphrey in Minnesota, Edward Kennedy in Massachusetts and Edmund Muskie of Maine.

The biggest Republicans among the governors, Ronald Reagan of California and Nelson Rockefeller of New York, swept back into office easily in the two largest states.

But elsewhere, the Republicans fared poorly in the races for state houses.

Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas and Claude Kirk of Florida were unseated by Democrats Dale Bumpers and Reubin Asker. Democrat Patrick Lucey ended six years of Republican rule in Wisconsin and John J. Gilligan won for the Democrats in Ohio.

Against the conservative triumphs, there were victories for liberals, as well.

★ ★ ★

In California, John V. Tunney, son of former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, knocked out right-wing Republican Senator George Murphy. And in Illinois, Adlai E. Stevenson III, son of a two-time Democratic presidential nominee and ambassador to the United Nations, defeated Republican Senator Ralph Tyler Smith.

Stevenson and Tunney, along with newly-elected Gov. Gilligan of Ohio, emerged as leading new national figures for the Democrats.

Segregationist George Wallace was elected with little opposition to a four-year term as governor of Alabama, a position from which he is expected to mount another third-party campaign for the presidency in 1972.

Water Board to Open 'Tap' To Save Goldstream Salmon

One hundred million gallons of water will be dumped into Goldstream to enable salmon to swim up the creek to spawn.

The decision to save the salmon, trapped at the mouth of the stream by low water levels, came today at a meeting of municipal officials and representatives of the federal fisheries department and provincial conservation branch.

Mayor Courtney Haddock, admitting the city has been "too timid" in dealing with water problems, said further meetings with government officials would be held to ensure that the problem doesn't occur again.

The water will be put into the stream starting next Tuesday, normal starting date of the Goldstream chum salmon spawn

Unless there are heavy rains, the drop in domestic water supplies could mean a shortage for Greater Victoria consumers by the end of the year.

The mayor said municipalities would appeal to citizens to conserve water by limiting their consumption until reservoir levels are brought up by rain.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford noted that the area's water supply has been hit hard by a third successive dry fall. Last month was the driest October in the region since 1936, according to the Dominion Weather Bureau.

Every drop of water now available — plus substantial rainfall — is needed merely

COOL TO VOTE AGE DROP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to lower the voting age were rejected in most of the 15 states where the question was on the ballot Tuesday.

With the vote count incomplete it appeared that Maine and Nebraska approved of lowering the voting age to 20 from 21, Montana and Massachusetts to lower it to 19 and Alaska to drop it to 18 from 19.

But voters in Washington, Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, New Jersey and Minnesota apparently voted against lowering it to 19 and Connecticut, Florida, Michigan and Hawaii voted down proposals for an 18-year-old vote.

The United States Supreme Court agreed to review a federal law passed this year lowering the voting age to 18.

Bit of Old England Inside All Citizens?

Inside every Victoria citizen there is a monocled, Ascot-hatted, 19th Century little bit of oLD England trying to get out.

This is what the area's Chambers of Commerce hope, anyway.

The chambers have designated May 24 to 29 of 1971 as the first festival of the Loyal Order of Victorian Enthusiasts (L.O.V.E.)

SPORTS INCLUDED

The event is to be called Victorian Days Festival, and will include cultural and sports events, and a "magnificent" parade, the whole event embellished with the 19th century theme and atmosphere for which Victoria is known.

While not strictly designed as "tourist flypaper," organizers hope to parallel such events as the Calgary Stampede.

The Ascot hats and monocles that locals should wear during this festival, therefore, will be Victoria's answer to the 10-gallon Stetson.

One of the orgamizers, Peter Tredgett, explained the festival aspirations Tuesday to the Interm unicipal Committee, saying "the main purpose of this community participation is to enthuse the population again into rekindling the 'Little bit of old England' atmosphere that is expected to prevail in Victoria and district."

NOT AFTER MONEY

Committee members seemed a little shaken when Tredgett told them he was not here to ask for money, that local service clubs are so far carrying the load.

"We will look to everybody, young and old, to co-operate with whole-hearted enthusiasm. To be successful, this must be a fun thing."

He will ask Victoria city hall today to declare into existence the Loyal Order of Victorian Enthusiasts.

The initials L.O.V.E. are no accident, said Tredgett. He hopes the word will get attention from the younger set.

The mayor will be named Lord Mayor, and there will be Knights and Ladies, and Barons instead of aldermen.

What will Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay be called?

How about "Lady of L.O.V.E.," suggested Tredgett.

swords of the period of the American Revolution.

La Presse says the cell broken by police, operated from a house in the heart of Montreal, in which weapons and documents relating to the FLQ and to urban guerrilla warfare were found.

Pa Presse says the six arrested made statements to police about their own cell, but they did not know any members of other cells.

HELD OFF

In Ottawa Tuesday Prime Minister Trudeau said the government held off implementation of the War Measures Act for five days after it was requested by the Quebec government.

He was answering charges that the federal government encouraged Quebec and the city of Montreal to request the act be invoked.

Trudeau said Premier Bourassa made the request Oct. 11 but that Ottawa refrained from taking action until Oct. 16 in hopes the police would be able to find the terrorist kidnappers of Laporte, later strangled, and Cross.

COULDN'T WAIT

The prime minister said the act was invoked because responsible men believed an insurrection was under way and the government "couldn't wait until 500 people were shot in the street" before moving.

In Quebec City, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said some of the 81 persons still in custody under the War Measures Act will face criminal charges by the end of the week.

He told a news conference lawyers for the justice department are still examining the files of those detained and preparing charges against some of them.

Asked whether charges of treason or sedition would be laid, Choquette said he is not excluding any kind of charge.

In Montreal, police said they continue to "draw blanks" in their investigation of the Laporte assassination and Cross kidnapping.

Police spokesmen in Ottawa, meanwhile, warned that the current lull in FLQ terrorist activity "is only the quiet before the storm."

FIRST STEP in protection and study of Canada's continental shelf was taken Tuesday when the Canadian Armed Forces took possession of the SDL-1, a midget submarine. It was launched with champagne and dubbed the Yellow Submarine. (CP Wirephoto)

. . . THE YELLOW SUBMARINE

Shelf is equivalent to 40 per cent of our land or about 1.5 million square miles. The potential mineral and marine life resources here are so enormous that it is impossible to estimate their magnitude.

"If we do not show ourselves willing and able to exercise meaningful control through study of these contingent sea areas, then we will forego our right to harvest them.

"We do not know what ecological damage is being done to the seabed by the use of modern super trawlers. We do not know what damage is being done to our fish resources by off-shore drilling operations. This new submersible will help answer these quastions."

On Oct. 17, 1969, Vice-Admiral J. C. O'Brien, then commander of maritime command, recommended that two submersibles be added to Canada's arsenal.

Leir said Tuesday he hopes more will be built and that at least one of them be assigned to the West Coast.

The SDL-1 will continue working-up trails until mid-November when she will be flown to the east coast and operate out of Halifax.

Ridgewell led a team of navy divers that carried out 21 scientific lockout dives from a submarine this summer for the east coast's Bedford Institute of Oceanography.

to meet normal demand through the winter, she said.

The decision at this morning's meeting was to be handed to the Greater Victoria Water Board at a meeting this afternoon.

The meeting was unanimous in commending Water Commissioner Ron Upward, who Mayor Elford said had been working 10 years to save the Goldstream salmon spawn.

"He is charged with the responsibility of providing water to the citizens of this area," she said.

MORE MEETINGS?

"If anyone is to be castigated for the manner in which this problem has been handled, it must be the members of the water board." Mayor Elford is a member of the board.

Future steps which could result from further meetings with government representatives would include installing holding pools and reservoirs in the Goldstream watershed.

Barring any more dry periods, a spokesman for the water board said installed capacity is capable of handling projected consumer demand until 1990.

governorship races in the South and elsewhere also put the president's opponents in a better position for 1972, with Democrats tightening their grip on patronage and influence important in a presidential election year.

In Congress, Democrats clearly had reason to be pleased at the results despite their losses in the Senate and their small gains in the House.

They blocked the most intensive and determined drive launched by one of the most politically shrewd Republican presidents they have ever faced in a mid-term election campaign.

The president and Agnew conducted their campaign on the single issue of defeating liberals they linked with violence, drugs, pornography and violent dissent.

The Democrats met the onslaught by claiming they were the victims of a smear and fear campaign, by playing on the fear of the electorate over inflation and rising unemployment, and by calling the president a liar.

The almost photo-finish result appeared to indicate that each party had convinced its own supporters of the arguments, it had made but had not managed to attract too many defectors to its side.

MacKenzie Joins Loggers

VANCOUVER — Jack MacKenzie, who was defeated recently in a bid to become regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, has accepted an offer to become business agent of the 4,500-member loggers local in Vancouver.

MacKenzie quit his post as regional vice-president to challenge incumbent Jack Moore for the presidency.

In the election which was completed last week, however, Moore was returned for a fifth two-year term.

N. Saanich Cautious Over Pool

North Saanich wants more details before agreeing to endorse a suggestion that it and Sidney should have a $75,000 swimming pool as a centennial project.

Finance committee chairman Ald. G. O. Cumpston will look into the latest proposal and report back to council.

Mayor J. B. Cumming said North Saanich has given approval in principle to the idea, but wants the details spelled out before final approval and wants no cost to the taxpayer without referendum.

Ald. Trevor Davis said the pool project should be put in its proper perspective. The two municipalities have about $7,500 for a Centennial project and he suggested just that amount of money be spent.

Bus Drivers In Dispute

Provincial mediator Gus Leonidas will enter a dispute between B.C. Hydro and the Amalgamated Transit Union, union secretary Preston Storey announced Tuesday.

The union represents some 200 bus drivers in Victoria and about 1,300 in the Greater Vancouver area.

The contract between the union and Hydro expired Sunday. Both parties applied for the services of a provincial mediator.

Details of wage demands and offers have not been made public.

Green Light Given Bids On Burns Unit

St. Joseph's Hospital has been given permission to call tenders for building a special burns treatment unit.

The unit, in the planning stages for several years, will be the only one in the area. It is to be named after the late A. W. Toone, former mayor of Victoria and secretary of the Victoria Labor Council.

A fund drive has raised $27,000 toward the estimated $56,000 cost with contributions coming from the city of Victoria, trade unions and private companies as well as individuals.

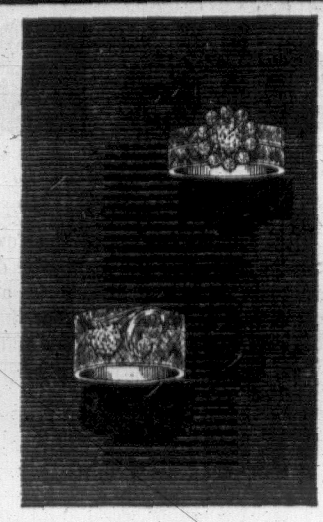

Rest of the cost of the unit will come from the provincial government.

'Stay Away From Our Town' Chetwynd Mayor Tells Douglas

CHETWYND (CP) — Mayor Frank Overle has warned national New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas to stay away from this Peace River community.

In an open letter to Mr. Douglas released Tuesday, Mayor Overle said remarks made by the British Columbia NDP leader, Dave Barrett, had severely damaged the town's civic pride and upset its citizens.

Barrett, he said, described Chetwynd as a community ringed by shacks that could only be duplicated in Mexico.

Overle warned Douglas if he was planning a tour of the Peace River country, to stay away from Chetwynd because it would be hard to guarantee that he would not have to "suffer the consequences."

BARRETT
. . . words spark uproar

A spokesman for Douglas' office in Ottawa said the national leader had no knowledge of Barrett's trip or subsequent statements. The spokesman said Douglas was unlikely to reply to the mayor's warning.

Barrett commented that if the mayor is serious in his concern he will press the Social Credit government of B.C. to provide housing for the people of the north.

He said there was no justification for the poverty he said he saw around northern communities — including Chetwynd.

He added a joking warning for Mayor Overle, saying that Douglas was at one time bantamweight boxing champion of Manitoba and was "well able to take care of himself."

How Prominents Fared in U.S. Vote

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

How prominent candidates fared in Tuesday's United States election:

Reubin Askew (Dem.), defeated Claude Kirk, right-wing Republican seeking re-election as governor of Florida. President Nixon and Vice-President Spiro Agnew had campaigned for Kirk.

Lloyd Bentsen (Dem.), won a Senate seat from Texas, defeating Republican George Bush, for whom President Nixon and Vice-President Agnew had campaigned personally. Both candidates are Houston millionaires describing themselves as conservative.

William E. Brock (Rep.), defeated Albert Gore, 62, veteran Liberal Democrat from Tennessee who had been in the Senate since 1953. Brock, who received help in the election from President Nixon and Vice-President Agnew, won a hard-fought contest.

James L. Buckley, Conservative, defeated incumbent Republican Charles E. Goodell and Democrat Richard Ottinger. Although running against a Republican, Buckley won support from the White House for his vigorous backing of President Nixon's policies. Buckley is brother of noted conservative writer William F. Buckley.

Dale Bumpers (Dem.), defeated Winthrop Rockefeller as governor of Arkansas. Winthrop, whose brother Nelson won an unprecedented fourth four-year term as governor of New York, was seeking his third two-year term.

Harry F. Byrd (Ind.), who held a Virginia seat in the Senate as a Democrat last term, retained the seat as an independent. He declined to run as a Democrat in a dispute over his party's loyalty oath and became the first third-party senator since 1940.

Emanuel Celler (Dem.), won his 25th term in the House of Representatives in New York. The 82-year-old Celler is chairman of the House judiciary committee.

Philip Hart (Dem.), won a third term as senator in Michigan, defeating Lenore Romney, 61, wife of George Romney, President Nixon's housing secretary. Hart, 57, is a prominent liberal.

Louise Day Hicks (Dem.) 51-year-old Boston grandmother who achieved fame as a foe of busing of students to achieve racial balance in schools, won a Massachusetts seat in the House of Representative.

Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), was elected to the Senate from Minnesota. After serving as senator from 1948-64, he was vice-president under Lyndon B. Johnson and was defeated by President Nixon in the 1968 presidential election. He takes over the seat vacated by Eugene McCarthy.

Edward M. Kennedy (Dem.), member of the famous Kennedy family who has been mentioned as a future candidate for the presidency, easily retained his Senate seat in Massachusetts.

Mike Mansfield (Dem.), re-elected senator from Montana, has served as majority leader in the Senate since 1961. A studious, quiet-spoken former political science professor, he was a five-term congressman before being elected to the Senate in 1952.

Edmund S. Muskie (Dem.), candidate for vice-president in the last U.S. election and considered a possibility to seek the presidency in 1972, was re-elected to the Senate in Maine.

Charles B. Rangel (Dem.), won the House of Representatives seat held for many years by Adam Clayton Powell, outspoken and controversial Negro from New York's Harlem district. Harlem Democrats picked Rangel, a Negro, over Powell earlier this year and he gained endorsement from the Republicans.

Ronald Reagan (Rep.), re-elected to his second four-year term as governor of California over Democratic Assemblyman Jess Unruh. The former movie actor, strong on law and order, received campaign help from President Nixon and several persons prominent in the film world.

Nelson Rockefeller (Rep.), won an unprecedented fourth, four-year term as governor of New York. He defeated Democrat Arthur Goldberg, former justice of the U.S. Supreme Court and U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Hugh Scott (Rep.), re-elected senator from Pennsylvania, is the Republican leader in the Senate. A senator since 1958, he is regarded as a "moderate" Republican and has occasionally voted against the Nixon administration.

John Stennis (Dem.), a member of the Senate since 1947, was re-elected handily over an independent Negro challenger in Mississippi. Stennis is chairman of the Senate armed service committee.

Adlai E. Stevenson III (Dem.), won an Illinois Senate seat against a Republican candidate strongly supported by President Nixon and Vice-President Spiro Agnew. He is the son of Adlai II, twice U.S. presidential candidate, former Illinois governor and former ambassador to the United Nations.

John V. Tunney (Dem.), son of former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, ousted Republican Senator George Murphy in California. The loser, a one-time film star, was strongly supported by President Nixon and his family.

George C. Wallace (Dem.), elected governor of Alabama; segregationist governor of the state from 1963-66, he was regent-governor during his late wife Lurleen's term. He was a third-party candidate for president in the 1968 election and is considered a possible candidate again in 1972. He was unopposed by Republicans in this election.

Lowell P. Weicker (Rep.), elected to Senate from Connecticut, defeated Thomas J. Dodd, the Democratic incumbent since 1959 who was running as independent, and Democrat Joseph Duffey. Dodd was denied the Democratic nomination after a spending scandal.

'Ideological Victory' Won Claims Agnew

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew said early today the Nixon administration had won an "ideological majority" in the Senate although Republicans did not gain as many seats as the White House hoped in elections Tuesday.

The vice-president said President Nixon would have a working majority on foreign policy issues and national defence controversies such as the anti-ballistic missile system.

Agnew said Nixon fully shared the analysis that the administration gained a working majority "along philosophical lines" even though it fell short of picking up the necessary seats to win organizational control of the Senate.

He made the comments in an early morning appearance at Republican national committee headquarters after watching returns and discussing them by telephone with the president.

Larry O'Brien, Democratic party national chairman, disputed Agnew's claim and said he did not see how it could be considered a Republican victory when the Democrats picked up at least seven governorships and 10 to 12 House of Representatives seats "and maintaining our position in the Senate."

. . . Little Change Next Door

IT IS NORMAL FOR THE party opposed to an incumbent United States president to make fairly substantial gains of seats in the off-year elections. The Democratic Party continues to hold its overall majority in both Senate and House of Representatives following yesterday's election, but since it lost two seats to the Republicans (and two to independents) in the Senate and gained only a relatively modest 10 seats in the House, the overall result of the heavy vote may be said to be favorable to President Nixon.

The reverse is the case in the state gubernatorial contests, where the Democrats gained eleven clear offices at Republican expense. The new position among governors indicates that the Democrats can muster important cross-country support, even though it was not reflected in normal Washington increases. The real significance of this, say analysts, will be seen in the improved position it heralds for the Democrats in the presidential contest of 1972.

While President Nixon may take satisfaction from the results, for which he and his vice-president labored so hard in extensive but rather unusual campaign tours, Mr. Nixon suffered an unsettling rejection in his home state of California in the defeat of Republican Senator George Murphy, despite the return to the state house of Republican Governor Reagan. The White House incumbent seldom participates in off-year elections to the extent that Mr. Nixon did in recent weeks. He put his personal prestige on the line, and it may be said in general to have paid off.

Although the Republicans occupy a minority position in both the Senate and the House, many of the recent gut-issue votes have minimized the importance of party affiliation and emphasized the philosophical attitude of individual members. This was evident in such vital votes as the recent ABM decision, in which the bill to increase ABM defences scraped through with bare-minimum support despite party standings. Indications are that the composition of the new Senate and House will not have changed substantially from the present in regard to members' personal attitudes. Some of the rightist Democrats are described as farther right than some rightist Republicans. Mr. Nixon appears, therefore, not to have lost strength in the legislatures.

As for the future, he may similarly be regarded as having lost—or gained—little in relation to 1972 second-term possibilities. His Vietnam, foreign and domestic policies, while still under heavy attack from much of the nation, appear to satisfy a substantial number of the voters, and even to be gaining ground in some areas. The next two years will be Mr. Nixon's test; he enters them battered but still very much on his feet.

Canadians may view the election results as an affirmation of the existing situation. There is in prospect little evidence of significant changes in U.S. foreign policy, although the vast forces already at work domestically and abroad could drastically alter this before 1972. A rightward trend apparently will be continued—perhaps given impetus by Canada's own sudden imposition of a tougher policy on violent dissent. In some of the current negotiations—with Russia on arms reduction, with Saigon on a Vietnam peace, with the Middle East belligerents on a settlement—the conclusion of the United States elections could invite a new look by foreign interests, now that no significant change in Washington's policies is to be expected.

Tragedy at Goldstream

Smothered By Red Tape

The other night I witnessed a race of fish-gasping their last in the tidal mouth of Goldstream. Biologists claim they are dying because they have completed a life cycle and for lack of water are spawning and dying uselessly in the muck of the salt flats. This is a scientific fact, but just as certain is the fact that they are being smothered to death by red tape and apathy.

Mr. Upward tells us he cannot let the necessary water into Goldstream for fear of running short of it next summer. He is not willing to gamble that there will be sufficient rain this winter to refill the storage dam. Wouldn't it be a terrible disaster if we couldn't water our lawns next summer? However, it does not seem very important that every four years from now on, Goldstream will be merely a lifeless creek every fall.

My guess is that after all the fish have died off, which will be a matter of days, the rains will come as usual and fill the storage dams to capacity and all the excess water, millions of gallons, will wash down Goldstream the entire winter.

I have been told that because of the new tunnel and storage system this problem will never occur again after this season. Shouldn't we take the chance and let the water loose then? The worst that can happen is brown lawns next summer but they will come green again. The fish will never return.

Maybe if people could see those poor fungus-covered brutes entering the stream each high tide only to be repelled at low tide, they would understand the need for immediate action. Each night a few more salmon are left dead on the mud without having fulfilled their destiny.

It's pitiful and stupid. If this salmon run is depleted completely because of Mr. Upward's unwillingness to gamble, I for one will ration my water for many years to come. Perhaps the burnt-brown lawns and scorched gardens in the "City of Gardens" will show visitors our shame for the crime we are committing at Goldstream.—M. J. Morry.

For Future Children

Please help save the fish at Goldstream so that the future children will see them.—Michele Cardey, age 7.

Concern and Leadership

May I as a citizen of Greater Victoria and as a water consumer in that area urge the Greater Victoria Water Board to do all within its power to make water available immediately to facilitate the spawning of salmon in the Goldstream. I am ready to do what I can, as a domestic consumer, to conserve water at this time, or, should the necessity occur, in the summer of 1971.

I further urge that the Board publicize its decision and appeal to the water consumers of Greater Victoria to join in a movement of massive support for the future of the Goldstream salmon. Such a gesture on the board's part would, in addition to its very immediate and practical achievement, serve both as an indication of concern for our environment and as an example of leadership to the people served. Such examples of leadership must come with ever-increasing frequency and commitment if mankind is to act intelligently, collectively and with selfless concern for our environment and for our future.—Laurence Cottrell, 4621 Cliffwood Place.

To Save Water

There is no water for the salmon at Goldstream? Here are some easy ways for people to save water:

1—Use only as much water as you need (too often, extra water is thrown away or allowed to flow freely down the drain straight from the tap).

2—Keep a container of water in the fridge (we waste a gallon of water just to fill a glass with cold water).

3—Use a small bowl to wash dishes and utensils and boil the necessary water in a kettle (again, we waste gallons of water letting the tap run to get some hot water).

4—Don't hose you car — wipe it with a clean rag.

5—Have an all-over wash each day with a face cloth instead of wasting gallons of water having a bath or shower.

6—Have one super clothes — or dish-wash (a washing machine uses the same amount of water for a few things as it does for a lot of things).

A golden rule for everyone would be: Never let a tap run for more than a few seconds except into a bowl or kettle.

Parsimonious, did you say? Of course! How else are we going to save water for the salmon and for ourselves?—Conservationist.

Nigerian Protest

It was with utter dismay that I read the disturbing and outrageous article by Ann Dunsmuir in a recent issue of your paper entitled: "In Nigeria one educated wife is quite enough." This was an article written on the experiences of Miss Fleming in Nigeria where she served under CUSO. Nigeria is a rapidly developing country and gives her warm welcome and hospitality to all that are interested in helping her towards achieving her goals. However, after reading the sweeping generalizations and half-truths in this article one begins to wonder if Nigeria should throw open her doors to people whose sole purpose of going out to help is to be in a position to ridicule people.

At this stage I must give the following facts to put Miss Fleming's remarks in the right perspective. In Kano, where Miss Fleming was reported to have taught in a modern school, there are no less than 22 primary schools run either by the Christian missions or the local authority.

There are also six high schools offering courses up to the higher school certificate level (the equivalent of Grade 13). There are three teacher-training colleges, an advance teachers' college which is part of the faculty of education of the Ahmadu Bello University. In addition, Kano has also got a technical institute.

One of the most modern airports in the world is in Kano. The palatial mud houses referred to by Miss Fleming do really exist in the walled part of the city. These have been left on purpose so that foreigners like her could admire some of the heritage that is ours. However, Kano city is not made up of the ancient walled portion alone and that is what Miss Fleming failed to tell Ann Dunsmuir.

I really find it difficult to imagine what novelty they had in the model school that will warrant "a royal visit" from the Emir of Kano (the paramount chief of Kano emirate). It may be relevant to know that the present Emir of Kano, Alhaji Bayero, is a qualified lawyer and barrister-at-law and has only suspended his practice to ascend to the throne of Kano emirate.

For Miss Fleming to insinuate that Nigerians have no sense of time as a European does clearly portrays her deep prejudices. She gets no thanks whatsoever for abusing the hospitality she enjoyed in Nigeria in this manner. Her sweeping generalization about Nigerian teaching methods as she experienced them in Kano has no foundations whatsoever.

In Nigeria, education below the university level is a state affair. This gives room for a considerable variety in teaching methods from state to state. In the Western and Lagos states education is compulsory for every child over the age of six. This was also the case in the Eastern states until recently.

In conclusion I will like to point out that given the opportunity to be of service should not be taken as liberty to ridicule the setup and traditions of the people served. Little wonder why the Nigerian government is now very reluctant to have more of either the American Peace Corps or the Canadian CUSO. The government has been rightly sensitive to articles like this one published by or at the instigation of persons who have been allowed into the country under the auspices of the above-mentioned organizations.

I am compelled to despatch copies of this article to the Federal Ministry of Education in Lagos, The Commissioner of Education in Kano State, the Daily Times (a national daily published in Lagos), the New Nigeria (another national daily published in Kaduna). Definitely articles like this one written at the instigation of Miss Fleming will make it a more difficult for other Canadians or any foreigners genuinely interested in helping Nigeria, to enjoy the typical Nigerian hospitality they deserve.—Olumuyiwa Ogunade, 444 Kingston St.

In All but Name

SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD'S historic declaration: "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die," has been superseded by the unfolding of our history. But the assumption that today he would have died a Canadian is also open to some question in the wake of Mr. Stanley Knowles' disclosure in the Commons last week that within recent months 23 Canadian undertaking firms have been taken over by two large United States funeral establishments.

His remark came almost on the eve of the announcement that Ryerson Press has been sold by its owners, the United Church of Canada, to the subsidiary of a large United States publishing house. And this follows shortly on the news that another well known Canadian firm, W. J. Gage, specializing in the publication of school texts, has been bought out by United States interests.

Added to all the other ownerships of Canadian industrial, commercial, financial, agricultural and real estate entities which now reside in the United States, it is fair to say that the Americanization of Canada extends from the cradle to the grave. If we ever read that control of the United Church of Canada itself has been sold south of the border we shall know that there is no escape, not even after an American funeral.

Looking Back

From the Times of November 4, 1916.

At a meeting of the special committee of council members and citizens selected to consider the question of a new traffic bridge across the Inner Harbor, the project was discussed in a general way. It was the unanimous opinion that before anything should be done the provincial government and each of the railway companies and the B.C. Electrical Company should be asked to appoint representatives to sit on the committee, in order that all interests may be properly represented.

Critical Years of Revolution When the Grand Dream Has Lost Its Old Magic

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

ONE of my oldest and wisest friends in Washington has visited Russia, for business reasons, every year since the middle of the Second World War. After his last trip he came home with a striking thought. Russia, he told me, was no longer the leading revolutionary nation but a sluggish giant with hardening arteries. The leadership of the world revolution had passed to the United States. Or, more accurately, the United States had always been the great rebel, despite its orthodox look, and at present was embarked on its latest of many social adventures, again leading the world.

Hutchison

Whether this judgment is valid or not, there can be no doubt that, in the broad sense of the word, the United States has undertaken, almost subconsciously, a revolution so deep, many-sided and unprecedented that no one really knows what it means or where it is going.

The process is so far-reaching, indeed, that the violence accompanying it, though shocking, would have been much worse already, and the repression much more brutal, in any society less free and flexible. Certainly, as we know now, from recent experience, Canada is caught up in that revolution, whatever name you give it.

As mentioned in an earlier report, the troubled politicians of Washington agree that the next five years will be the most critical in American history, and the same thing may well be true of Canada. I was also assured by the highest sort of authorities that within those five years the United States would have its affairs under full control. The only question in these men's minds is whether a return to stability must involve a serious abridgment of the personal freedom that has animated the nation since its beginnings.

Such an arbitrary time-frame, it seems to me, is too neat, hopeful and unrealistic, like one of Karl Marx's infallible laws, or Chairman Mao's sacred messages from his private pagoda.

Revolution Unchecked

To be sure the views of a Canadian visitor in Washington at this tumultuous moment are of no value and would not be worth mentioning if they did not have the support of wiser men equipped to discuss them. At any rate, I found such men in Washington, Harvard University and elsewhere who believe that the next five years may bring stability, with law and order restored, but that they will hardly touch, much less arrest, the revolution.

It cannot be arrested, because it comes out of the immeasurable depths of American life, the long "pursuit of happiness" and, above all, the galloping technology which must change everything, peacefully or otherwise, faster than we yet guess.

To state the obvious facts so baldly is to risk misunderstanding. I am not speaking here of revolution in the classic sense, on the French, Russian or Chinese models, but revolution proceeding quietly, almost unnoticed, in the habits of daily life, in the home, in the school, and, most obviously, in the technological system. There, as we all know vaguely, the changes are rapidly under way. And if the larger changes ahead are unpredictable, if the day-to-day politics do not control but merely reflect them, at least two startling symptoms are plain enough.

The first, I venture to think, is an abstract fact outside the range of practical politics but coloring the entire social and political climate with unknown future results. It is that the American people as a whole, for the first time since their original revolution in the eighteenth century, have suddenly discovered not its failure but its inadequacy in the twentieth.

Perfection Image Shaken

Only in the last five years, or less, the grand American Dream has lost its old magic. A people who thought themselves superior to all others by some unique, divine ordinance, and assumed that their social system, with a few curable flaws, was just about perfect, have been shaken by doubt as never before. They are no longer an island unto themselves but, in Donne's famous phrase, "a part of the maine," a morsel of humanity. The bell of these times tolls for everyone.

If any Canadian thinks that these truths are self-evident, mere platitudes, let him pause and reflect for a moment. Let him remember that, until last month, Canada as a whole made the same general assumption as its neighbor had always made — even a larger, more comfortable and less realistic assumption.

Before its society was stricken overnight by certain events it assumed that while the United States was in profound trouble, Canada, being small, almost powerless and dangerous to no one, had a special immunity of its own, a safe northern sanctuary from the prevailing storm. For us the bell was distant and muted. Now we hear it, too.

A second sound can be heard in the United States and is beginning to echo in Canada — the sound of revolt not against affluence as a desirable goal but against its tragic misuse. That, of course, is why the so-called rebellion of youth is so interesting, however capricious, wanton and sometimes criminal it may be.

The young, or part of them, have seen, earlier than the old, that the first people to achieve real affluence are grossly mismanaging it and, by mismanagement, are threatening to deplete the capital asset and ignore the highest goals of society. In short, the pursuit of happiness has somehow lost its way.

Economists like John Kenneth Galbraith and others whom I shall mention later thoroughly understand the misuse of America's basic resources, the raging appetite, the blind worship of the Gross National Product, the neglect of the economic infrastructure and, worse, of the physical environment.

Changes Coming

Such experts quarrel about the extent of the damage and the proper methods of repair. They are presently locked in a great debate on methods, though it was deliberately fudged in yesterday's congressional election campaign. And not long from now we may expect pretty drastic changes in the economic policies of government.

But all these arguments, and all the impending policies, are no more than the outer surface, the temporary froth of a revolution unknown before our time in human affairs and emerging from sources far deeper than economics, sources in the American mind or, if one can dare to use the word, the American spirit. In another report (though it is a reckless venture) I shall try to discuss this rather frightening but, by and large, encouraging process yet without name or public recognition.

East Europe Squeezing Out from Under Soviet Heel

By STANLEY KARNOW

One of the impressions that strikes a visitor to Eastern Europe these days is not so much the extent of Soviet power in the region as the degree to which Moscow's command over the area is slowly yet perceptibly disintegrating.

This suggests that even though the East European states are likely to remain under Russian influence far into the future, their ties with the Kremlin could slacken enough to permit them to exercise varying measures of autonomy in their external as well as domestic affairs.

It seems, therefore, that the Soviet bloc may be as vulnerable to gradual fragmentation as that undefined collection of nations that some politicians still refer to as the "free world."

The recent two-week tour of the United States by Romanian president Nicolae Ceausescu, with its frequent stops at corporation board rooms, is symptomatic of this phenomenon. Other East European leaders are striving for less dramatic but equally significant changes in their relations with Moscow.

The Hungarians are out in front in their efforts to eliminate the obsolete Communist system of over-centralized planning and encourage skilled factory managers to operate according to such radical capitalistic principles as producing for the market.

A prime aim of this reform, which appeals to the Poles and even to the rigid Czechoslovakian government, is to induce people to forget the loss of their liberties by providing them with plenty of consumer merchandise. The reformers, after all, are also dedicated Communists.

Since so many East European countries styled or revamped their industries to suit the Soviet Union, only the West can give them the equipment to manufacture consumer goods. Hence their interest in trade outside the bloc.

Real economic reform, however, is more than a matter of machinery and markets. It requires the ouster of the entrenched party apparatchiks committed to the old communist system — and to their bosses in Moscow.

Thus a key question at the moment is whether the Soviet rulers will allow Eastern Europe to evolve towards heterodoxy — or whether they will again clamp down, in one place or another, as they did in Czechoslovakia two years ago.

The apparent erosion of Soviet authority in Eastern Europe stems partly from new trends within the Kremlin. Much of it also reflects shifting attitudes and policies developing inside the diverse East European states themselves.

An event that is bound to have a profound impact on the links between Moscow and Eastern Europe was the Kremlin's decision last summer to move towards a rapproachement with West Germany.

The Russians were propelled in that direction for an assortment of reasons, ranging from their need for West German economic co-operation and their hope of gaining status for East Germany to their dream of driving a wedge between Bonn and Washington.

But whatever Moscow's motives, its decision means that the East Europeans, no longer compelled to be more royalist than the king, can turn more and more openly towards West Germany for increased commerce and investment capital.

The dynamic West Germans have already been staging substantial forays into Romania and Hungary. They deal with East Germany, and they have considerable potential in Poland and Czechoslovakia, who want both their capital goods and consumer products.

Rising trade between Eastern Europe and the West could conceivably pose a threat to COMECON, the unimaginative body that is supposed to govern business within the Communist bloc. At the same time, it offers an important stimulus to the East European regimes that are trying to liberalize their economies.

The Russians plainly have the preponderant military muscle in the area. Their forces in East Germany, Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia total 31 divisions — or more than 30,000 troops — and they can double that strength within less than a month.

Having witnessed the experience of Czechoslovakia, where Alexander Dubcek's liberal programs were promoted with a maximum of publicity, many East Europeans submit that the Kremlin is less sensitive to the substance of reforms than to the manner in which they are carried out. Their byword, consequently, is discretion.

If that is wishful thinking, the limits of Moscow's tolerance are certain to be tested as the countries within the Soviet orbit seek their own solutions to their particular problems. And if the Russians repeat their Czechoslovakian performance, it will serve to prove that only guns can keep their empire intact.

...and Hungary Leads the Way

BUDAPEST — Just 14 years ago, Russian tanks commanded this beautiful city, and hopes for liberal reform seemed to be destroyed forever.

But today, Hungary is clearly the most progressive state in the splintering Soviet bloc — or, to cite the faintly ironic remark of a university professor here, "We are the most capitalistic of the Communist countries."

JANOS KADAR
. . . turnabout

The man mainly responsible for the evolution is the Hungarian Communist boss, Janos Kadar. Once the archetype party hard-liner, he is now the model of flexibility, and his style might serve as an example for other East European moderates.

For in contrast to the spectacular attempts at revisionism by Alexander Dubcek, which provoked the Kremlin to invade Czechoslovakia in 1968, Kadar has been going about the business of reform in subdued and rather successful fashion.

Changes have a way of whetting tastes for greater changes. A long-range risk in Kadar's reform program, therefore, is that it may stimulate more demands for liberalization than he can satisfy without dismantling his Communist system significantly.

Moving Slowly

So far, however, he has managed to modify Hungarian Communism gradually through a combination of diplomatic, political and economic compromises. And, by moving slowly, he apparently believes that he can keep the situation under control.

On the diplomatic front, Kadar has displayed total loyalty to the Kremlin by adhering faithfully to Russian foreign policies. Among other gestures of fidelity to Moscow, he cracked down on his own Communist party colleagues who criticized the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

This approach has partly been prompted by realism. There are 80,000 Soviet troops stationed here, and not even the most liberal Hungarian wants a repetition of the 1956 events, when the bid for freedom was mercilessly crushed, despite protestations of support from the west.

Most important, Kadar has been appeasing the Russians in order to assure himself a large measure of internal autonomy for his domestic political and economic reforms.

Tolerate Dissent

On the political front, he has sought to rally a consensus by operating on the principle that "anyone who is not against us is for us," to quote a line he has reiterated in recent years. Within this context, then, he has tolerated a fair degree of safety-valve dissent.

For instance, no steps have been taken to curb liberal intellectuals like Prof. Gyorgy Lukac, who regularly airs his unorthodox views in the Yugoslav press. Earlier this year, for the first time since Hungary turned Communist, a member of Parliament cast a symbolic vote against the state budget.

Though the parliament is by no means a real legislature, its debates have been getting livelier and less conventional. At the same time, genuine trade union activity has been on the rise.

Last year, Kadar decisively eased his long-standing dispute with the Vatican by approving 10 new bishops appointed by the Pope. Both the Catholic church and the government have given up trying to settle the case of Cardinal Mindszenty, who has been living in the U.S. Embassy here since November 1956.

But the really major renovation introduced here has been on the economic front, where the regime has shifted towards decentralization by delegating increased authority to the managers of factories and other enterprises. Several motives underpin this reform.

Efficiency Rewarded

Productivity was lagging as long as industries were clogged with vast numbers of inefficient, underpaid workers recruited by officials who knew nothing about factory management. Now, under the reform, plant directors are empowered to streamline their operations by firing superfluous workers and paying higher wages to the others.

Shops and warehouses were cluttered with unwanted goods ordered by traditional Communist planners concerned more with breaking statistical targets than meeting consumer needs. Now industrial managers are encouraged to gear their output to the market.

Directors of different factories are also dealing with one another directly instead of passing through the snarled bureaucracy. Moreover, they now have the authority to negotiate rather independently with western businessmen, many of whom see profitable opportunities here.

These reforms, which seem to be working, spell the inevitable doom of the old-fashioned Communist economic apparatus. Inevitably, too, the political commissars will be weakened as the society changes to suit the public rather than to obey party dogmas.

So, if Hungary is any augury of the future, the liberalization of Eastern Europe is likely to come about less from outside "liberation" dreams than from "internal contradictions" of the sort Marxist ideologues used to promise would cause the defeat of capitalism.

Is Canada Moving to Conservatism? Liberal Policy Conference May Tell

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA—The country, said the cabinet minister stabbing moodily at his steak, is in a very conservative frame of mind. Poverty is almost a forgotten problem, and any radical attempt at redistributing income would only solidify the opposition and thus do more harm than good.

If you don't believe it, he added, just take a look at the Commons where the opposition parties, sensing the politics of the time, hardly mention social security issues these days.

The minister was explaining gently that there is not too much to be expected in the way of social security legislation.

An activist academic at Carleton University, encountering the conservative phenomenon from another angle, surveyed the new crop of students this year and concluded gloomily that the stimulating sixties are over and the stolid seventies beginning.

The enthusiastic reaction across Canada to Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's drastic response to the FLQ crisis has convinced other observers that the nation is turning against change, dissent and the permissive society to restriction, reaction and perhaps repression.

●

Thus it is becoming the conventional wisdom in Ottawa that the country is seeking a quiet life of conservative politics in which the major issue will be taxes: keep 'em down.

This interpretation of the public mood will be tested at the Liberal party's National Policy Convention here Nov. 20-22, which has been designed to make a sophisticated reading of national opinion on a variety of issues.

Interestingly, the preliminary data available in almost 300 policy resolutions from across Canada tends to contradict the theory that this is the era of conservatism.

There appears to be, for example, a clear consensus in favor of a guaranteed income plan, and the only real fight at the conference may be on a proposal to tell the government to get a scheme into operation within a time-limit — probably before Jan. 1, 1972. This would be quite a surprise for the cabinet minister and his colleagues who think the sex appeal has gone out of social justice.

There is wide support also for measures to protect economic sovereignty. The economic nationalists in the party are quietly planning a campaign at the convention to ensure that a strong statement calling for Canadian control of Canadian business and resources will be written into Liberal policy reversing the decision of the 1966 conference which rejected nationalism in favor of free trade.

Further reform of the abortion law is high on the conference agenda, and family planning to control pollution by over-population is thought to be becoming a fashionable cause.

The demand for legalization of marijuana will probably highlight the debate on drugs.

Policy resolutions for political parties are written mainly by a few activists who may be opinion leaders but are certainly not representative of the general public. But at least the Liberals on this occasion have made an attempt to reach beyond their own ranks for ideas and opinions.

The policy-making process began a year ago at Harrison Hot Springs conference in British Columbia where the party leaders from across the country met the experts and academics to define and discuss the issues of the times.

The background material generated by this meeting went out to local Liberal parties, and to the public in thousands of pamphlets inviting opinions. The idea was to draw non-Liberals into local policy discussions, as a form of participatory democracy.

Some constituency parties carried through on the participation plan with considerable success, while others almost ignored it. There were 11 district policy meetings in British Columbia but the Maritime region conference had to be scrapped because of provincial elections.

The second phase of the policy-making plan, in other words, has been patchy, and it is not clear how representative are the 300 resolutions which have flowed into headquarters.

The resolutions have been condensed by so-called task forces, and they go forward now to the full conference in three week's time, where an experimental system of debating and voting will seek a more refined opinion than a simple passed-or-defeated decision.

Four forums will first discuss the major issues under 11 headings. Any resolution winning a 25 per cent vote in a forum will be passed on to a plenary session of all delegates.

After debate in the plenary session, delegates will be asked to mark a ballot to indicate whether they strongly agree have no opinion, disagree or strongly disagree with each resolution.

●

Fifty girls will staff the polling station to help delegates vote and make a swift analysis of the results.

It is hoped in this way to get a more thoughtful and revealing expression of opinion from 70 to 80 per cent of the delegates, instead of a hurried and sometimes confused show of hands on a yes-no question as delegates leave the hall at the end of a debate.

Sensitive to the criticism that their's is a fat-cat party and that only the middle and upper income groups can afford to attend their conferences the liberals are also making efforts to ensure that the young and the less wealthy can attend

From the $50 registratration fee to be paid by each delegate, $10 will go into a pool to help pay travel expenses and another $10 into a pool to subsidize expenses of delegates needing help. Billets in private homes are being sought for those who do not want to face hotel bills, and many constituency parties have raised funds to pay expenses for the delegates they send to Ottawa.

As yet, of course, it is much in the realm of good intentions. The garrison conference was less than a success in sparking ideas and interest. Phase Two involved only limited opinion outside the party.

Despite the elaborate planning and the new techniques, the national conference may turn out to be much like all the others. But it will at least provide the cabinet, and the commentators, with the best assessment available of the social mood of the country.

Moonlight on Academe

By ART STOTT

A young friend of mine close to the scene is disturbed by what he calls academic moonlighting.

Basically, he is trying to assess the ethics of a practice which permits a person engaged by a university to assume outside obligations — usually for profit—that have nothing to do with his duties at the university.

My friend is not concerned with what a professor or senior officer does with his free time. He is concerned with the diffusion of effort that occurs when a professor, department head or senior university official is invited, or drafted, to do non-university work by some agency that requires his particular skills. The extra-curricular work may involve duties on a commission or on a specific research project not connected with the university as such, but for which the draftee is paid. Payment can be made straight-forwardly in cash or indirectly by generous expense allowances.

Since a number of these projects are government-sponsored, the individual concerned is being twice paid from the public purse. Is it right? my young friend asks.

The question becomes more pointed when the project which absorbs the interest and time of the university employee involves commercial considerations related to private concerns, directly or indirectly hoping for profit.

★ ★ ★

I have been told of distinguished university figures whose reputations in their particular fields have lent lustre to the universities with which they are associated. They constitute one of the attractions drawing students with special interests to particular institutions.

But when these men of distinction, because of their very distinction, are called away frequently to deliver papers in far-flung quarters of the world, making their services unavailable to the fee-paying students who came to study under them, it does seem that somebody is being short-changed.

Similarly, when a professor or department head is pulled out of the lecture hall or the lab to tackle a problem in another field perhaps as a commission member or as specialist in a study aimed at a particular difficulty — he obviously is not able to discharge his obligations to his students.

The other side of the picture is clear enough. If, in the universities, there appear to be men and women with special aptitude, knowledge or training which can solve, or carries promise of solving, major public problems, then society, acting through the authorities, may reasonably expect to call on them for special jobs.

My young friend recognizes the force of that argument. He nevertheless points to two developments which ensue. A person is hired by a university, he notes, to work for the university. When such an individual is lifted out of the university, either the university job does not get done or other people have to carry an extra share of the load. And, he suggests, the situation seriously jolts the layman's concept of schedules required for maximum effectiveness on the part of the professor.

★ ★ ★

The layman's concept, as I understand it, generally accepts the principle that the teacher in higher education needs time not only to prepare the material he will present to the students, but time for refreshment from mental labors and time to devote to study to keep up with his subject.

★ ★ ★

Hence the professor isn't standing before his class every minute of the working day and requires periodic release from the lecture hall or the lab. This is usually available to him through longer-than-normal vacations —during which he may be studying himself and by sabbatical years, when he is expected to move from labor to refreshment which can include improvement of his mind and his capabilities as a professor.

Two questions arise. If a professor can abandon his class for a substantial period of time while he does the outside job for which he has been drafted, why was he hired by the university in the first place? If he can do both jobs, moonlighting as my young friend calls it, why does he need the time usually granted him away from class in the course of the normal term (relatively short lecture periods and relatively long vacations) and the sabbatical year?

My young friend has raised some nice ethical and practical questions.

THE BEGINNING OF AN EMBASSY

In China It's 'The Canadians Are Coming'

By NORMAN WEBSTER
Special to The Times

PEKING — While the Hutungs of Peking have not exactly echoed to cries of "The Canadians are coming," there has been considerable interest here in the arrival of the diplomats who will establish the first Canadian embassy in the People's Republic of China.

Those in the closed circuit which is Peking's diplomatic community have been looking forward to greeting the first westerners to set up shop here since the French, more than six years ago. Hostesses are already making plans.

Chinese officials, too, have confessed to interest in the arrival of the Canadian representatives. And the Chinese press has been having itself a time with reports on the favorable way the agreement to establish relations has been received in the world community.

THEY CAME

So Saturday night the Canadians came. After a day of travel that began in Hong Kong, Charge d'Affaires John Fraser and the team which will prepare to set up the embassy arrived at Peking Airport.

The six men were met by Hsu Chung Fu, head of the western European, American and Australian section in the Chinese foreign ministry. He greeted them warmly, then led them to a lounge while baggage and passports were attended to.

THEY SIPPED

Sipping tea under a large painting of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, Fraser told Hsu he was especially happy to be arriving in Peking "in such auspicious circumstances."

He has visited Peking twice before in 1965 and 1967.

The Canadians are staying at the cavernous Peking Hotel, located on the Boulevard of Eternal Peace and near the Square of Heavenly Peace. Three cars with drivers have been placed at their disposal by the Chinese.

They have visited the square and the Temple of Heaven and watched and were watched by the crowds which flock downtown on warm Sundays. Monday the work began.

The task is a housekeeping one but housekeeping with a difference. The team includes communications, property and management and administrative experts. They will have to grapple with the complex problems of establishing an embassy from scratch.

The primary task will be to select offices and an ambassador's residence from whatever alternatives are offered by the Chinese.

Decisions on equipment and furnishings must be made. Accommodation and living conditions generally for members of the mission and their families will also be investigated.

Current plans are for the team to spend two to three weeks here. Then all will leave to place their orders and get shipments moving.

In January, Fraser will return along with other members of the permanent mission. The ambassador, who has not yet been named, will follow as soon as the mission is functioning.

MIDDLE RANK

Plans are for the embassy to have six officers in addition to secretarial staff. A seventh officer will come later. This will put the mission in the middle rank of Peking embassies in terms of size.

Three of the six currently in Peking are expected to return to the embassy. Fraser will be the senior man under the ambassador with rank of counsellor.

Also returning will be Stephen Kaufman, a Chinese-speaking member of the Canadian Trade Office in Hong Kong, and administrative officer David Stockwell, who has been studying Chinese in Ottawa.

In Peking with the survey team, but not coming back to the mission, are A. G. MacAuley, T. E. Arbuckle and R. M. Dawson.

The group arrived here the day before the departure for Shanghai of Charles Gallo and David Jackson, members of the Hong Kong Trade Office. The two men spent a busy week here calling on the Chinese state trading corporations and visiting factories, communes and historical sites.

By coincidence, too, the team flew up from Canton on the same plane with the New China News Agency correspondent in Canada, Pu Chao Min. Pu is making his first visit home since he left last November to reopen the NCNA's Ottawa bureau after a three-year absence.

Americans 'Instructors' In Morocco

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States has been operating a major naval communications complex in Morocco with 1,700 American military personnel to service the Sixth Fleet, under the guise that the men are "instructors."

Senate investigators forced on to the public record Saturday the first public, official admission about actual operations at Morocco's large Kenitra base complex. Previously it was made to appear that all U.S. bases and forces were removed from Morocco in 1962, under an agreement made by President Eisenhower in 1959.

Legal control of the Kenitra complex was transferred to Morocco in 1963, enabling it and the United States to deny that any "U.S. base" remains and to contend that Americans were at Kenitra to provide "instructions" to Moroccans, Senate investigators said.

CHIEF VICTIM

The real chief victim of the official secrecy has been the American public, said Senator Stuart Symington (D—Mo.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations subcommittee on U.S. commitments abroad.

Heavily censored testimony on Morocco and Libya shows, said Symington, that "the Soviets are aware of our presence. They have a multi-million-dollar military assistance program of their own for the Moroccans and . . . a Czechoslovakian military training mission is currently operating in Morocco."

David D. Newsom, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, testified that "we have no commitment to Morocco to assist in the event of any attack."

PRIME REASON

Newsom acknowledged that one prime reason the United States increased its operations in Morocco after that nation gained independence from France in 1956 was "to preclude Morocco dependence upon the Soviet Union."

Since then the United States has supplied Morocco with $660 million in military and economic aid, Newsom testified.

Now, with the Soviet Union sharing as a military supplier to Morocco, Symington said, "what we have done again is get ourselves involved in a country where we are half in and half out, and the Soviet Union is half in and half out."

Union Oil

Union Oil Co. of Canada earned $3.59 million or 75 cents a share during the nine months ended Sept. 30.

The earnings were down from $6 million or $1.26 a share a year earlier.

The lower incline was due mostly to operating difficulties with a natural gas processing plant in northwestern Alberta and higher exploration and general expenses.

Datashare

Riley's Datashare International Ltd. lost $61,300 during the three months ended Aug. 31 compared with $150,100 a year earlier.

The earnings were on a gross income of $849,700.

In an interim report, president Arvil Manor said losses, which had been growing larger in the year prior to the last three months, were expected to be trimmed in the next quarter.

Rio Algom

Rio Algom Mines Ltd reports profit of $11.6 million or 90 cents a share for the nine months to Sept. 30, up more than 19 per cent from $9.7 million or 74 cents a share in the corresponding period of the previous year.

President R. D. Armstrong said the Lornex copper-molybdenum development in the Highland Valley of British Columbia should be in production early in 1972, and may exceed the earlier estimate of $123.6 million, Rio Algom paying all or part of the increase.

Inco

International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. reports net earnings totalled $160.66 million during the first nine months of this year compared with $97.4 million during the comparable period last year.

The 1969 sales and earnings were reduced by a strike that closed company operations during most of the third quarter, the July-to-September period.

Sales for the first nine months of this year totalled $802.98 million compared with $568.98 million in the same period last year.

Earnings per share for the nine-month period were $2.16 this year and $1.30 last year.

Paragon

Paragon Properties ltd. earned $220,266 or 23 cents a share on gross revenues of $3.66 million during the first nine months of this year.

The unaudited interim statements reports an operating income of $457,571 before depreciation and deferred taxes.

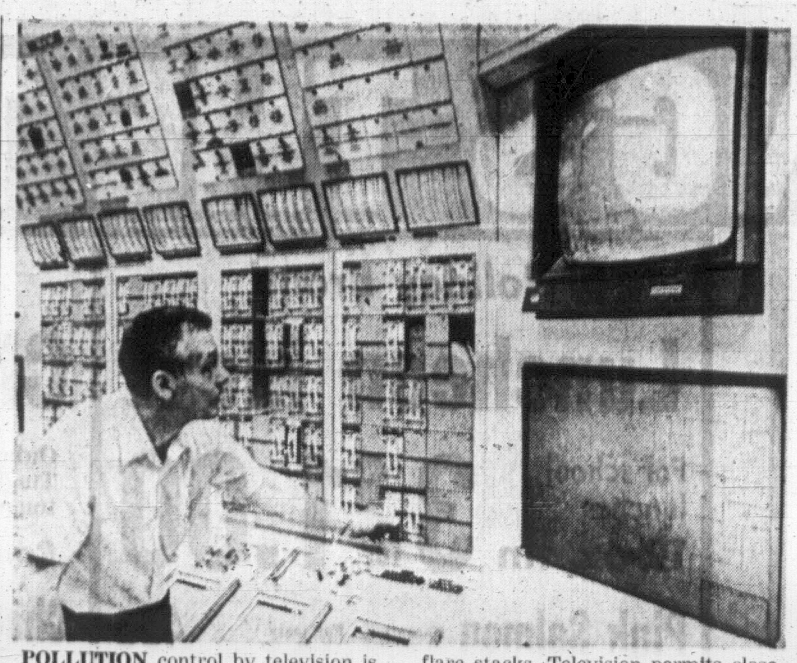

Comparable figures for the same period of 1969 were not available due to a different accounting system.

Western Broadcast

Western Broadcasting Co Ltd. the private TV monopoly in B.C., reports an ncome from operations of $1.2 million in the six-month period ended Sept. 30, up from $787,000 for the corresponding period last year, or from 41.8 to 45.9 cents a share.

The company's income includes earnings for the first time from Radio QR Ltd. (CHQR Calgary) and Express Cable Television, a CATV operation in North Vancouver.

Net sales by the company's radio properties increased to just over $3 million dollars from $2.2 million while net income after provision for earnings of preferred shares was $459,000 compared with $391,000 in the same period last year, an increase of 17 per cent.

Highly Successful EDC Will Seek More Funds

Canada's year-old Export Development Corp. is down to its last $180 million in lending funds and this winter will ask its parent, the federal government for "substantially more."

President Hugh Aitken said here Tuesday it would be up to Ottawa to say just how big the bid for new money will be. By the same token it will be a government decision how the money is raised — for example by a bond issue.

The record is good — going back to 1945 when the predecessor Export Credits Insurance Corp. was formed — and this may enhance the request of the new corporation.

25-YEAR RECORD

As one of the country's more successful state-backed organizations, EDC can point to 25 years of insuring some $3 billion worth of export sales and foreign loans of more than $500 million enabling Canadians to sell goods and services covering a wide spectrum.

AITKEN
. . . B.C. prospects good

Aitken said they have even managed to make collections on deals that soured, albeit at low interest and over a long term.

On their second visit away from Ottawa for purposes of holding a directors meeting, and the first to be held in the Pacific region, a dozen, EDC directors and officers made a side trip from Vancouver to have lunch here with Trade and Industry Minister Waldo Skillings.

The group returned to Vancouver shortly afterward—and resumed private meetings with current and potential exporters.

Aitken described B.C. chances of increased export trade as good with development of trade with Pacific rim countries of the Far East, such as Hong Kong, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines. The corporation has recognized this potential with its Vancouver office, he said.

BUSINESS TRIPLES

Business here has tripled in three years, Aitken said 8 per cent of the policyholders of EDC are in B.C. and that they represent 20 per cent of the dollar volume, or $100 million.

EDC insures up to $500 million on its own account and $500 million on the government's account. It can lend up to $800 million of which $600 million is on its own account, the rest of the government's.

Lending rates range from 6 to 9 per cent.

The type of thing insured for B.C. exporters includes apples, machinery, trucks, books, lead and zinc, commercial printing jobs, fish, chemical and water treatment plants and an item of growing importance which EDC finances is engineering services, for projects in such places as Chile and Mexico.

The prospect of a Marxist government in Chile is non-pussing to Aitken. There have been no difficulties since the election and experience with Communist nations has always been good in the past.

Chile's last payment came on schedule, after the Marxist win. "Our exerience with China has been very good," Aitken added.

"Traditionally she paid cash for all she buys, except for wheat. The last wheat sale was for 25 per cent cash. They always pay on the button, in fact I'm told it is a few days in advance sometimes."

Since Canada's recognition of Peking, business should accelerate, Aitken said.

Since its inception, the corporation has paid $16 million in claims, three-quarters because of political risks and only one-quarter due to credit risks. Of this, $12 million was recovered.

When insuring, EDC always splits the risk with the exporter, perhaps 70-30, but going as high as 90 per cent of the load.

EDC and its predecessor were modelled originally on a British system dating back to 1919, but in its Canadian form it has served not only as a pattern for Israel, Hong Kong, India and Pakistan, but for the British who wanted to reorganize their system.

Dividend Payments Record Seen

Bongard, Leslie and Co. Ltd., a national investment firm which tabulates dividend payments, is looking for the 12th consecutive record in annual payments by Canadian corporations.

The company notes the cumulative total for 11 months — $1.38 billion — is the highest in history for that period, 5.6 per cent above 1969 and 10.3 per cent ahead of the same period in 1968.

With only one month left in the year, dividend payments for 1970 "should be at an all-time high for the 12th consecutive year," Bongard said.

In November, corporation and trusts paid out $79 million, up from $69.24 million and $67.89 million in the two previous Novembers.

Miscellaneous industrials accounted for $30.2 million, up from $27.97 million and $27.25 million, respectively; mining companies paid $14.32 million, up from $10.29 million and $12.54 million; utilities paid $6.57 million ($4.29 million and $4 million); and trusts and institutions paid $27.9 million ($26.67 million and $24 million).

Two Pipeline Projects Announced

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two pipeline projects in Manitoba estimated to cost $10.75 million are planned for next year by TransCanada Pipelines Ltd., the company's chief executive officer, James W. Kerr, announced Tuesday.

The projects are:

- A 15-mile section of 42-inch pipe northwest of Brandon in the Miniota area. This section will be part of the fourth pipeline on Trans Canada's main-line right-of-way through Manitaba and will contain the first 42-inch pipe to be installed on the company's system.
- Twenty-three miles of 36-inch pipe, some to be installed in an area on the southwest edge of Winnipeg and the balance between Ile des Chenes and Spruce in eastern MWU.

Trans Canada now has 832 miles of pipeline in Manitoba.

Wheat Sales Well Above Last Year

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada exported 8.3 million bushels of wheat during the week ended Oct. 28, the board of grain commissioners said Tuesday.

The board said in its weekly report this was some two million bushels less than the previous week's exports but considerably in excess of the 3.9 million exported during the same week in 1969.

Total wheat exports to date in the current crop year equal 119.4 million bushels, compared to 50.1 on the same date last year.

Visible stocks of Canadian wheat again declined, totalling 388.5 million bushels at the close of business Oct. 28, some 70 million below the comparable 1969 figure.

Farmers' marketings of 4.8 million bushels were greater than both last week's 4.4 million bushels and the 3.6 million of the same week last year.

Commercial holdings of barley, flax and rapeseed increased during the past week but stocks of rye were fairly steady and oats declined.

King Resources in Cutback

DENVER (AP) — King Resources Co., the Denver-based natural resources firm, said Tuesday it has not made the $672,540 interest payment due Nov. 1 on its $25 million, 5.5-per-cent convertible subordinated debentures.

A spokesman said the company "anticipates that it will pay the interest prior to the expiration of the 30-day grace period."

If the payment is not made, terms of the issue sold to the public on Nov. 26, 1968, specify that the principal and all accrued interest—a total of $24,456,000—may be declared due and payable immediately by the trustee, the United Bank of Denver.

The failure to pay notice was the first issued by King Resources since it obtained an agreement with major creditors two months ago for olderly pay-off of its current debts, estimated at that time at more than $40 million.

Since then the company has slashed its payroll from 739 to 536, dropped its 35-man KR Graphics subsidiary, written off a small computer software business and has squeezed its Denver office operations into half the space.

The company also has been selling off some of its interests. These include 15 per cent of its 27 million acres of oil and gas holdings in the Canadian Arctic to the Sun Oil Co. of Houston, Tex.

King Resources reported it lost $16 million in the first half of this year, compared with a net profit of $25 million in the same period of 1969.

What happens if you ask your son, your brother-in-law, or your next door neighbour to be your executor?

Carrying out your wishes under your Will is the culmination of your life's work, ambitions, frustrations, and achievements.

Too often we've seen the problems of having relatives, friends, and business associates act as executors. For example, being brutal but realistic, chances are one or two of them are your own age so you can't count on continuity of the executorship (as you could with a corporate executor). Again, relatives tend to be too close to the situation — it's difficult (even embarrassing) to be completely objective. Finally, estate taxation is a very complicated subject for someone not completely familiar with ever changing taxation situations in major countries.

We suggest you name us your executor. The foundation of our business is, and always has been, handling estates. You're assured of continuity and objectivity. We have the special knowledge and expertise in investment management and taxation you need. And we have offices right across Canada and overseas, so your wife and other beneficiaries can establish themselves comfortably and without worry wherever they please.

If, on the other hand, having a large corporation looking after your family affairs seems a little too impersonal, remember, we at Royal Trust have wives and children, too.

Trio Rescued After 9-Day Storm Ordeal

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (CP) — A routine 12-hour voyage became nine days of terror for three young Canadians rescued Tuesday from the rock-bound coast of Alaska's Prince of Wales Island.

"We are lucky to be alive," said Charles Taylor, 24, of Sandspit, and the owner of the 36-foot converted trawler that smashed on the shores of the northern island last Wednesday.

"All the credit for us being alive should go to the boat . . . it was really well-built."

With Taylor were two other men, Jean-Paul Yirka and his brother David, 21, from Kitchener, Ont.

The three left Prince Rupert Oct. 25 and started a 100-mile trip across Hecate Strait to Sandspit in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

WRONG TIME

"I went out when I shouldn't have gone out," said Taylor.

Storms hit the area during the opening hours of the trip, a week ago Sunday.

Amid 20 and 30-foot seas, near gale-force winds and heavy rain, Taylor was forced to change course and "sail with the weathtr in the strait."

The men fought savage weather all night Sunday and by Monday conditions had improved slightly — enough to change back to a proper course.

Then the storm regained its intensity, and the boat lost power.

A sea-anchor was made from three used tires and 300 feet of rope and they drifted close to Metlakahtla Island and anchored on the rocky ocean bottom Tuesday night.

FIRED FLARES

Taylor said he sent up flares to try to catch the attention of persons he knew lived on the island.

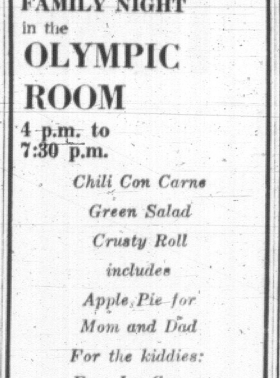

But the anchor broke loose and they drifted southeast overnight and all day Wednesday, finally breaking up on the rocks off Windy Point on Prince of Wales Island.

"We jumped ashore while she was breaking up," said the owner.

They managed to get a fire going and were spotted from the air Tuesday by John Brusanick, a pilot scavenging for logs.

The three were reported in excellent condition by a United States coast guard official.

Canada Go-Between

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuter) — Malaysia has asked Canada to sound out China about joining other big powers in guaranteeing the neutrality of Southeast Asia.

Malaysian Deputy Premier Tun Ismail disclosed this at a news conference on Tuesday after returning from the United Nations. He also said he believes China would be admitted to the UN by 1972.

Tun Ismail said he had discussed Canada's establishment of diplomatic relations with China with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and had asked that Malaysia's plan to guarantee the neutrality of Southeast Asia be conveyed to Peking.

The Malaysian plan involves guarantees from the Soviet Union, the United States and China.

Tun Ismail said Sharp did not say definitely whether the request would be carried out but he gained the impression that Canada would do so at a suitable opportunity.

Charred Hole All That Remains of Townhouse Complex

Builders Suspect Arson

By STEVE HUME

Arson is suspected as the cause of a fire that demolished a complex of townhouses at an unfinished construction site in the Gordon Head area of Saanich early this morning.

Although Saanich fire officials declined to comment this morning prior to completion of an investigation, a spokesman for the construction company building the townhouse apartments discounted other possible causes.

"The fellow who owns it says it had to be set," Saanich Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland said, "but the building was completely demolished—that makes it pretty difficult for us."

Police were investigating a report that a car raced away from the scene as the first people arrived at the fire.

Karl Fritz of Wigmar Construction offered a $1,000 reward for information about the fire that would solve the mystery.

The blaze, which was first reported shortly after 1 a.m., soon became an inferno attended until 3:30 a.m. by four trucks and 20 firemen from Saanich, Victoria and Oak Bay.

The fire tied up all Saanich firemen, and Oak Bay fire crews who were also responding to the blaze were rerouted to handle another fire which broke out at 593 Linnet Lane in Saanich.

Chief Bill Pearson of Oak Bay said he had to call in four off-duty firemen to man the Oak Bay station.

Victoria Fire Department supplied a pumper truck and four men from the Burnside Station, said Deputy Chief Carl Coates.

It is standard procedure for Greater Victoria fire-fighting organizations to provide automatic back-up and assistance when a major fire ties up all of one municipality's men and equipment.

Damage Estimate Not Yet Made

Saanich fire officials, who opened an investigation into the blaze this morning, declined to make an estimate of damage in the fire.

It was too complex a loss for an off-the-cuff rough estimate, said one official.

The buildings affected, part of a project known as Gordon Head Townhouses which is reached via Blair and Laval from Shelbourne Street, were the second phase of the town house project.

About 12 units were caught by the fire.

Fritz said that of the 60 units, half were 70 per cent complete and the other half 30 per cent complete.

He said some $150,000 worth of heavy equipment was quickly shifted from the danger area.

The blaze also threatened residential houses in the neighborhood, and police evacuated some families early in the fire.

One telephone pole supplying power to the houses on the north side of Laval was burned down.

And a lucky shift of the wind prevented houses in the area from being damaged by the fire.

Officials said only the fact that the wind had shifted to the north, not the prevailing pattern in the area, protected houses on Laval from serious damage.

The townhouse project was fully insured.

THE FAMILIES GO THROUGH HELL

Each Day, in Quiet Victoria, 5,000 Get Drunk

More than 5,000 people in Greater Victoria get drunk every day.

There are an estimated 3,000 alcoholics in the area, and a further 2,000 residents are endangering their health by drinking excessively.

There are about 500 familes on welfare as a result of alcohol problems. Every day they and other families go through hell because of an alcoholic mother or father.

Those figures were produced this week by the Alcohol Problems Priority Committee, formed last April by community groups concerned about drinking abuse.

The committee included representatives of Alcoholics Anonymous, the Alano Club (social arm of A.A.), Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism, Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., Lower Island Association for the Recovery of Alcoholics, Salvation Army, medical profession and concerned individuals.

Excessive drinking and alcoholism, the committee found, had become a permanent part of Canadian society. In the United States authorities rate alcoholism as the third most dangerous public health hazard.

Last year the B.C. government realized net earnings in excess of $60 million from the sale of alcohol, but the need for treatment facilities for alcoholics has not generally been recognized.

★ ★ ★

As a result of the findings of the Alcohol Problems Priority Committee, the Greater Victoria Alcoholism Association will sponsor a two-day workshop on prevention Nov. 25 and 26 at the First United Church Fellowship Hall, 932 Balmoral.

The GVAA says Victoria needs a 20-bed detoxication centre as part of a general hospital.

The group is also calling for establishment of a metropolitan public health agency to treat and prevent all drug dependencies, including alcoholism, and to co-ordinate the work of other groups working with drug problems.

Other facts about alcohol abuse:

- Annual expenditure on liquor in Greater Victoria is estimated at $20 million, not much less than the combined revenues of the four municipalities;
- The average drinking couple spends about $45 a month on alcoholic beverages;
- In 1969 16 people were killed and 480 seriously injured in traffic accidents where alcohol was a factor;
- Fifteen per cent of hospital beds are occupied by problem drinkers, and 20 per cent of the patients admitted to psychiatric units have drinking problems.
- Getting drunk is part of the graduation ceremonies of a large percentage of high school students.

UBCM Urges Cash Controls On Transients After Welfare

The Union of B.C. Municipalities has pinned a large part of the blame for this year's increase in welfare costs on transients.

The UBCM's official position was to be put before Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi today.

The position paper asks for a reduction in the municipal share of welfare costs to 10 per cent from the current 20 per cent. An alternative would be to raise the municipal per capita grant by $3.

The UBCM has also defined "transient" and proposed methods of controlling the amount of welfare money given to this sector of the welfare receiving population.

INSTEAD, HOSTELS

A transient, according to the UBCM, should receive no cash allowances, but that hostels "properly controlled and supervised," should be provided by the province at a number of locations in the Lower Mainland and elsewhere.

Transients are defined as persons away from their normal residence who are applying for assistance.

Normal residence would be interpreted to mean the parent's home in the case of persons, male and female, under 25 years of age. For the over-25s, residence would be where they lived during their last employment.

SEPARATE

The paper says that the UBCM believes a "very significant portion of the rapidly escalating number of social assistance cases in B.C. this year can be attributed to the large influx of unemployed employable transients as well as to the difficult economic situation . . . in the province."

The transient hostels set up by the government would include tents in the summer months "away from the city centres" and male and female camps would be separated.

"If hostel accommodation is offered to, and is refused by, applicants, no alternative support is to be given under any circumstances," the paper says.

A cross-checking system of identifying transient welfare applicants should be set up. If any cash is given, it should be limited to only basic shelter and food.

"Overages for rent, clothing, fuel, emergency health aid, etc., will NOT be granted."

The province, the UBCM says, should arrange by contract for emergency hostel accommodation at rooming houses, hotels and charitable institutions to make beds available.

All transient welfare applicants should be required to be registered with Canada Manpower to continue on assistance.

All B.C. applicants under 19 years of age should be given accommodation for 48 hours only.

"Parents to be telephoned or otherwise quickly notified that infant is to be returned to them at their expense," the paper says. "Failure here by the parent would result in a charge being laid under the Protection of Children Act."

Finally, "work projects" such as roads to recreation areas and marinas should be provided for unemployed employables.

Manslaughter Charge From House Fire

Keith Shepherd, 28, of 558 Sumas, earlier charged with arson, was charged with manslaughter Tuesday before Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre in provincial court.

Bail was set at 2,500.

Shepherd was charged with arson following a fire Aug. 6 in which Fred Dewhirst, 82, was killed by a fall from the third storey of a burning house on Michigan Street.

Hospital Strike Saturday?

Operating engineers at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals may go on strike Saturday.

Local hospital spokesmen have said earlier they will use supervisory personnel to keep the steam and refrigeration equipment running. But picket lines could hamper operations if other union members refuse to cross them.

The International Union of Operating Engineers received a mediation officer's report this morning, leaving the union free to strike after 72 hours.

International representative Ed Callan said he has called a meeting of representatives from the 28 hospitals involved, to be held in Vancouver Thursday at 5 p.m.

Strategy already decided upon will be outlined then.

"Strike action will be very quick after our meeting tomorrow," Callan said, while declining to say when the engineers would walk off the job.

He did say the engineers would put pickets at all hospital entrances in Victoria.

"We're assured of other trade unions respecting our picket lines."

FOR SOME AN EARLY BOXING DAY

Municipal employees in Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt will have the day off Dec. 24 in lieu of Boxing Day, which falls on Saturday this year.

Greater Victoria intermunicipal committees was told Tuesday contracts in the three municipalities stipulate that an alternative day off must be granted when a holiday falls on a Saturday or Sunday.

There is no similar clause in the contract covering Saanich employees.

Youth Week Starts Monday

Youth Appreciation Week in British Columbia begins Monday and continues until Nov. 15.

A cabinet order Tuesday said the proclamation recognizes the achievements of the young people of the province and also seeks to encourage the further endeavors of youth.

Crisis Line Under Study

A group of university students is studying the need for a crisis telephone line to help people cope with bad drug trips, to aid lonely and alienated youth and to avert suicide attempts.

Thirty students met Tuesday night at Pacific Drug Dependency Centre to assess the need for the service. After further study, the group will meet again next week to decide whether the line will be set up.

Staff would be volunteer, with the help of psychiatrists, psychologists, doctors and social workers.

Grants May Save Gallery From Need to Cut Staff

The Intermunicipal Committee agreed Tuesday to recommend granting the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria $8,000 to avoid cutting gallery staff.

At its meeting Tuesday afternoon, only Saanich representatives voiced doubts as to whether that municipality would pay its share.

"We just haven't got the money," said Ald. Leslie Passmore. But he voted along with the other municipalities' committee members to recommend they all pay their shares.

A letter from gallery director Colin Graham said the full deficit facing the gallery is $14,500 but he will attempt to raise the difference of $6,500 by "extraordinary fund-raising efforts."

The gallery's annual meeting last week was told insufficient operating grants could mean eliminating the position of assistant director, held by William Hoare.

The intermunicipal sharing formula apportions $3,200 to Victoria, $3,040 to Saanich, $1,040 to Oak Bay and $640 to Esquimalt.

In his letter, Graham said other galleries of comparable size receive larger grants than the $12,000 given by the four municipalities this year.

Windsor's received $30,000, London's, $100,000, Oshawa, $50,000, and Saskatoon, $80,000. Burnaby Art Gallery, existing in an old house and without any collection, receives a tax-free grant of $15,000.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IF PARLIAMENTARY debate doesn't stray down too many windy alleys, the heavy hand of the bogeyman War Measures Act will soon be lifted from Canadian necks. That will be a relief, though not necessarily to the prophets and practitioners of violent terrorism, for whom other rods are in pickle.

The situation that caused a tough prime minister to invoke the War Measures Act is far from resolved. Nor will it be, even when the murderers of a provincial cabinet minister and the kidnappers of a British trade commissioner are brought to trial. A final solution of Quebec's troubles may be arrived at somehow and sometime — though I doubt that any of us here present will be around to hail the day.

That's not to say we can't be grateful for small mercies, of which I rate Justice Minister Turner's bill for a Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act as one.

When it's passed, the non-violent dissenter should be able to breathe somewhat easier.

Meanwhile, it's interesting to note Canadian reactions as they surfaced during recent weeks of life under a formidable piece of legislation which should soon be returned to storage.

If local attitudes offer a reasonably accurate barometer, the vast majority of Canadians took the imposition of the War Measures Act very calmly indeed.

Most of those I've talked with regard any threat to their civil liberties as largely hypothetical. Their feeling can be summarized more or less like this:

"Trudeau did what needed doing with the only adequate instrument then available."

"Government becomes pointless if those elected to govern shrink from doing so."

"We don't pretend to like the War Measures Act, but we like what's been happening in Quebec a lot less."

In sum, I find these sturdy views. They are neither lethargic nor hysterical — merely the responses of men and women not easily spooked.

My own feeling is that the middle-of-the-road Canadian deserves a good deal of credit for his refusal to snort, shy and show the whites of his eyes when confronted by a worrying situation. He convinces me that in spite of rumors to the contrary, Canada may have a fairly solid future, after all.

There are others who haven't done too badly. I'm not of Conservative Opposition Leader Stanfield's camp, but am willing to give credit where due.

Stanfield may take forever to arrive at an opinion and somewhat longer to express it. Even so, I think he has given us a sound example of how a party leader consigned to a watchdog role should conduct himself in a time of national stress.

He didn't obstruct for the sake of obstructionism, a move that could have cost his party dear. But he has remained a reasonable critic of government, and for this I respect him.

Although I fail to see him as a future PM, there are worse men to have around than this plain Nova Scotian.

There are, of course, dangers inherent in repressive if temporarily necessary anti-terrorist measures. The chief of these hazards is that such legislation can be misused, or applied with an excess of self-righteous enthusiasm to witch-hunts of one sort or another.

Some of the uses to which a few of our highly vocal but less than thoughtful citizens would turn such measures are nothing less than amazing.

Vancouver's excitable mayor was by no means alone when he wondered aloud if the War Measures Act could be applied to the hippies against whom he appears to hold so monumental a scunner.

Others would bring doom thundering down on the heads of any group they happen to look on with a disapproving eye. This eagerness to grind a hatchet reached its extreme when one rabid phoner-in to a radio show would have the War Measures Act used to squelch another station's electronic music, which she labelled subversive.

Such haters apart, however, Canadians do appear to have taken these weeks in stride. This was a considerable feat: in view of the extreme reluctance of the federal authority to let daylight into the swamp, it becomes nothing less than remarkable.

Although left more in the dark than they liked — and perhaps more than the declared emergency required — the prople of Canada did very well.

ADDITIONS NAMED TO VICTORIA TEAM

Five provinces will be represented this month when Canada makes its appearance at the World amateur baseball championships at Cartagena, Columbia.

Bob Lacoursiere of Saskatoon, president of the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball, said Tuesday six players and a manager have been added to the Victoria Centennials team which won the Canadian championship.

Victoria, which edged Saskatoon in the national final at Brandon, will supply 12 players and coaches Bob Lumley and Keith Todd. Curly Haas of Winnipeg was appointed general manager.

Players added for the World event include: Roy Rowley of Saskatoon, a pitcher-third baseman; Glennis Scott of Brandon and Les Lisowski of Winnipeg, both pitchers; shortstop Tom McKenzie of Kitchener; pitcher Roger Fortin and catcher Yves Blanchard, both of Montreal.

Twelve countries will compete in the single round-robin tournament in the South American country—Nov. 18 to Dec. 2. They are Canada, the United States, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Holland, Italy, Mexico, Panama, Puerto Rico, Venezuela, Columbia and The Netherlands Antilles.

Sabre Shuffle Brings Keenan

By Canadian Press

"Shuffle Off to Buffalo" had a modern beat added Tuesday as Punch Imlach conducted his own scores of the 1920s hit song in an effort to bolster his sagging Buffalo Sabres.

The fast-moving, fast-talking Imlach completed three deals in a matter of hours, moves he hopes will improve his first-year National Hockey League team.

He claimed veteran defenceman Bob Baun from Detroit Red Wings for the $30,000 waiver price, then promptly traded the 34-year-old hardrock to St. Louis Blues for two players—defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot, a 38-year-old defenceman and penalty-killing specialist, and winger Larry Keenan, 30, who played in the Western League with Victoria Maple Leafs.

Earlier in the day, Imlach secured right winger Paul Andrea from California Golden Seals. He began his wheeling and dealing Monday by taking winger Steve Atkinson from the Blues.

The expansionist Sabres, who had a share of fourth place in the East Division about a week ago, have since tumbled into the division basement.

SCHEDULE RESUMES

Imlach will get a chance to see if his personnel shuffle pays off Thursday night when the Sabres are at home to Vancouver Canucks, another expension team this year who currently holds fourth spot in the East.

After two days of inactivity, the schedule resumes tonight wits five games. Montreal Canadiens meet Minnesota North Stars at Bloomington, Minn., Los Angeles Kings are host to Toronto Maple Leafs, New York Rangers are in Oakland against California Golden Seals, Detroit Red Wings visit Chicago Black Hawks and Vancouver is in Pittsburgh against the Penguins.

In other NHL developments Tuesday, the Rangers assigned defenceman Mike Robitaille and forward Jim Krulicki to Omaha of the Central League. Their departure reduced the New York roster to 19.

BOIVIN RETIRES

It was announced in Montreal earlier in the day that the 14 NHL teams now may dress 18 players plus two goalkeepers for the remainder of the season.

The league's general managers had ruled earlier that each club was allowed to dress 17 forwards and defencemen plus the two goalies for each game until Nov. 1.

Previously the clubs were allowed to dress only 18, including the two goaltenders.

The North Stars announced the retirement of Leo Boivin, 38, veteran defenceman who attended the Minnesota training camp but had not played any regular-season games. He will remain with the club as a player scout.

Montreal Canadians recalled defenceman Greg Boddy and centre Fran Huck from Montreal Voyageurs of the American League for tonight's visit to Minnesota.

Canadiens will use Boddy as a replacement for Jacques Laperriere, sidelined in a Montreal hospital by a pinched nerve in his neck, and Huck to take Henri Richard's place. Richard has a groin injury.

Right winger Yvan Cournoyer will also miss tonight's game. He is recovering from a fractured left foot. However, left winger Marc Tardif, sidelined by an arm infection, will play against the North Stars.

Stolen World Rugby Cup Wrong One

BRADFORD, England (Reuters) — The Rugby League World Cup was stolen from a busy hotel lobby during the weekend but the trophy for this year's championship is safe in the offices of a London insurance company.

"Whoever stole it has stolen the wrong one," British League secretary Bill Fallowfield said. "The $600 cup was on a display table in the same hotel in this northern industrial town where the reigning world champion Australian team is staying. It was presented for competition by the French Rugby League in 1954.

• This year's trophy, given by a British insurance ompany, is for the 1970 championship only and will be retained permanently by the winner of Saturday's final between Britain and Australia in nearby Leeds.

• Hotel manager Norman Birrell said he first discovered that the 40-pound silver-plated cup was missing Sunday morning.

• "I don't think I was taking an undue risk leaving it on display in the lobby because people are milling around all day long and a porter is on duty nearby 24 hours a day," he added.

• Fallowfield said although the new trophy, now in the care of an insurance ompany, will be won outright Saturday, the missing one may be needed again for future championships.

Hole-In-One For Wakeham

Bill Wakeham collected his second hole-in-one since becoming a professional when he sank his tee shot on the 155-yard fourth hole Tuesday at Cedar Hill Golf Club.

Wakeham's first hole-in-one came during the B.C. Open in 1964. He turned pro by accepting the special prize of a boat and trailer.

Ray Harrington, Ron Griffiths and Bruce Rands witnessed Wakeham's ace.

Lions Not For McMahon But Delbridge Interested

VANCOUVER — Vancouver businessman Clayton B. (Slim) Delbridge confirmed Tuesday night he might want to buy the British Columbia Lions if the current owners show an interest in selling the club.

Commenting on published reports that he and city industrialist Frank McMahon might consider buying the Western Football Conference club, Delbridge said he "could be interested."

"If the members wanted to sell it, we could provide better management. But we're not looking to buy if the members want to keep it."

Delbridge is a former president of the club. McMahon is on the board of directors of the National Hockey League Vancouver Canucks.

McMahon indicated little interest in the proposition and said: "I'd like to help the football team, but ownership is a little out of my realm right now."

There are about 3,000 members in the non-profit B.C. Lions Football Club, formed in 1951.

Meanwhile, a team director and former president, Alan McEachern, resigned Tuesday shortly before the club announced the new position of executive general manager.

He said he could not agree with the way the club treated current general manager Denny Veitch, by creating the new job and then calling for applications.

Two Cooks Not Ample, Lions Going for Three

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions Tuesday announced creation of the position of executive general manager, who would have complete authority over the Western Football Conference club's operations.

Lions president Ian Barclay said the establishment of the post, to be filled by late December on the recommendation of a committee to the board of directors, reflects in no way on present personnel or the club's record this season.

"Let me emphasize that Denny Veitch is still the general manager and Jackie Parker is still the head coach," Barclay told a news conference.

SIGNIFICANT CHANGE

"It represents a significant change from our present organization. It doesn't work with divided responsibility where the duties of the general manager and the coach overlap and it comes back to a lay board for the decision."

Barclay stressed that the club was not giving anyone a blank cheque to operate the Lions and said the hiring of an executive general manager does not necessarily mean the board will not select the head coach.

VEITCH FIRST

Peter Birks, chairman of the selection committee for the new job, said Veitch, general manager for the last four years, will be the first person the group will ask to apply.

When Veitch was asked if he will apply for the post, he replied: "I have the job. They'll have to take it away from me. I'm not quitting."

Veitch is the leading candidate for his own job, but Barclay said both he and Parker could remain with the club under the new executive general manager.

Veitch also dispelled rumors of friction between himself and Parker in the operation of the club.

NO FEUD

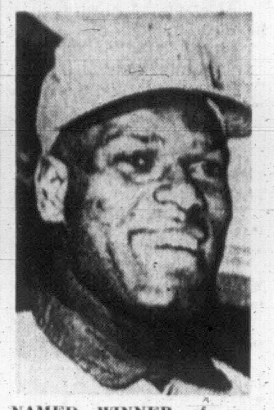

"There is no feud between us," he said. "I recommend certain things for the football club because that's my job.

"For the purposes of history, I don't want to be remembered as the man who fired Dave Skrien and Jim Champion.

"I had nothing to do with the hiring and firing of Skrien and Champion. Skrien was hired two years before I became general manager."

Barclay would not clearly define the responsibilities of the executive general manager, but it is believed he would run the business office, establish the routine for recruiting and have the final word on the selection of players.

The position will be similar to that of Bud Poile, vice-president and general manager of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, who alone answers to the owners of the team.

NAMED WINNER of coveted Cy Young award as National Baseball League's top pitcher was Bob Gibson (above), who finished with 23-7 record after a 2-3 start with St. Louis Cardinals. Gibson collected honor in 1968 and thus joins Sandy Koufax of National League and Denny McLain of American League as only pitchers to win trophy more than once. Gibson, named on all 24 ballots, drew 118 points to 51 for runner-up Gaylord Perry of San Francisco Giants.

PORT ALBERNI SQUAD CLIPS COUGARS 6-4

PORT ALBERNI — Victoria Cougars of the B.C. Junior Hockey League, short five regulars because of midterm exams at the University of Victoria, bowed 6-4 to Port Alberni Labatts of the Pacific Coast Amateur Intermediate League in an exhibition game here Tuesday night.

Wayne Statham paced Labs with three goals while singles were chipped in by Ray Knight, Albin Brooks and John Margetts.

Bob Mayer (2), Randy Bock and Ted Plowe counted for Cougars, who return to league battles with a game against Vancouver Centennials at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Victoria's Memorial Arena.

Pill-Taking Charges Branded 'Ridiculous'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Charges by a former player that National Football League teams use drugs were branded Tuesday as "utterly ridiculous" by the trainer of Minnesota Vikings.

Dave Meggyesy, a former linebacker for St. Louis Cardinals, made the charges in the latest issue of Look Magazine.

"I don't know anything about Meggyesy's personal life and I can't understand how he can make such a statement that reflects on teams he knows nothing about," said Fred Zamberletti, trainer of the Vikings since the team was organized in 1961.

"It's utterly ridiculous. I have never given a player a pep pill during my time with the Vikings, and never will. It's against team policy.

"If a player is hurt, his backup man plays. It is better to use a healthy player than one who is handicapped. To my knowledge no Viking player has ever taken a pill."

'DEHUMANIZING'

Meggyesy says he quit football because he claims it is "dehumanizing," and that "a lot of trainers do more dealing in drugs than the average junkies."

In a denouncement of the sport as "our version of bread and circuses," Meggyesy also said there was under-the-table payoffs and abuse of injured players. He said he saw this first-hand as a collegian at Syracuse University.

Meggyesy says in the article, excerpted from his forthcoming book "Out of Their League," that he saw players fed, at an astonishing rate, not only steroids, but also amphetamines and barbituates.

"... There are pro teams that dispense amphetamines and barbituates like penny candy."

Asked to comment on that phase of Meggyesy's article, Don Weiss, public relations director for the NFL said: "We have no interest whatsoever in promoting the sale of Meggyesy's book."

Alouettes Rocked By Suspensions

MONTREAL (CP) — Three days before their Eastern Football Conference semi-final contest against Toronto Argonauts, Montreal Alouettes face some major player shuffles following the suspensions of Dennis Duncan and Bob McCarthy.

Running back Duncan, the EFC's leading ground gainer in 1969, and wide receiver McCarthy were suspended by the club Tuesday for the remainder of season because of what head coach Sam Etcheverry called "conduct detrimental to the football team."

Team officials refused to comment on the nature of their offences but Etcheverry said the two were suspended "for violations of certain rules we lay down for team members."

The head coach said the violations were committed off the field.

"I'm sure I'm one of the easier disciplinarians in the football coaching ranks but I do have a few rules and I expect them to be followed.

WARNED PREVIOUSLY

"Both of these players had been warned and then they went out and did it again. That's nothing more than contempt for my rules. You take action."

The Montreal coach said Bruce Van Ness, who replaced Dick Smith at slotback when Smith was traded to Winnipeg Blue Bombers, will be used in Duncan's spot against the Argos.

Richie Davis, normally a defensive halfback, will likely move into the slotback spot and Tom Pullen, who alternated with McCarthy, will remain as wide receiver.

Etcheverry said defensive halfback Bob Storey will be used as a relief man on offence and Lew Cook, who came off the injured list Tuesday, will play in Davis' regular position.

"I'm aware there could be criticism," Etcheverry said of his decision to suspend the two players, "I've been fair and this was something I had to do."

MAY CONFUSE ARGOS

The former quarterback in his rookie season as a coach said the Alouettes will fill the gaps left by Duncan and McCarthy and that the player shuffle will confuse the Argos, coached by Leo Cahill.

"In any event," Etcheverry said, "this should give Leo something to think about with his defences."

In Toronto, Cahill was already thinking about the effect the suspensions might have on Saturday's game and he gave no indication the suspensions increased his optimism about the sudden-death playoff.

"During the regular season, when all things are equal, it might give us an advantage," he said.

"But now that we're into the playoffs, the suspension of these two players could have one of two effects. First if could lull our players into a false sense of security not having to face those two players, or secondly, it could rouse their players into trying that much harder to make up for the loss."

Jake Jacobs Wins Masters

WHITE ROCK — Victoria's Jake Jacob captured the Master Bowlers' Association of B.C. men's five-pin championship on Sunday after rolling a six-game total of 1,653.

Jacob topped runner-up Reg Boucher of Chilliwack by 29 points while Wayne Davies of Port Coquitlam finished third with 1,619. The victory for Jacob was worth $200 and another Victorian, Wally Weinberger, finished sixth to collect $25.

Ruby Mile of Burnaby won the women's title with 1,539 to edge out Helen Lindsay of Richmond by one point. Rose Netzlaw of Surrey placed third with 1,494. Evie Weinberger of Victoria was sixth with 1,441.

Owl Rally Winners

Norm Ogden and Brooke MacKenzie of Vancouver have been declared winners of the Victoria Motor Sports Club Owl Rally by accumulating only 33 penalty points in the two-day weekend event which covered 405 miles over the southern end of Vancouver Island.

Another Team Expected In Western Boxla Loop

VANCOUVER — There is a strong possibility that a fifth team will join the Western Lacrosse Association next season.

While speaking at the third annual awards dinner, commissioner Tom English said that "expansion has to come and we feel there is room for a fourth franchise on the mainland.

English added that the four existing teams — Victoria Shamrocks, Coquitlam Adanacs, New Westminster Salmonbellies and Vancouver Burrards — are prepared to introduce a draft system to stock the new franchise.

Deadline for applications to set up a franchise has been set as Jan. 15, tentative date of the annual league meeting.

Richmond and North Vancouver have been suggested as possible locations for the new team.

English also stated that the WLA showed a 20 per cent increase in attendance last season with all four clubs reporting a gain.

Royals Plan U.K. Jaunt

Victoria Royals of the Western Canada Soccer League have their eyes set high for the 1971 season.

Royals, who captured both the league and playoff titles in their inaugral year with the WCSL, are planning a tour of Britain.

Owner Jim Irvine, who was at the WCSL general meeting Monday night in Regina, revealed Tuesday that he is negotiating for a six-game tour of the British Isles next summer.

"It's just a matter of making satisfactory financial arrangements," said Irvine. "I'm certain that there will be no serious problem."

Clubs that have been approached are Newcastle United, Ipswich Town, West Bromich Albion, Cowdenbeath, Linfield, Portadown and Dublin's Shamrock Rovers.

The tour is expected to take place in late July or early August, just before the opening of the United Kingdom soccer season.

Although this is also near the end of the WCSL season, Irvine is attempting to get the league to set up a schedule that would allow Royals to take off three weeks for the trip.

Irvine also said that he is confident that Brian Hughes will be back for a second season as the team's playing-coach although three U.K. clubs are seeking his services.

VIKING VIEWS

By Mark Hume

The university soccer, rugby, and hockey teams are well into league play now, and all are doing surprisingly well.

The varsity soccer squad, which looked weak in pre-season action, has come on strong and is now holding down second spot in the Victoria and District Soccer League. The Vikings weren't expected to do well this year, as they have only three players back from last seasojn, and were without a coach until one week before their first game.

The rugby Vikings opened their season with a loss, but have gone undefeated in the city league since then.

The real surprise on the rugby scene, however, is the Norsemen. They are presently engaged in a four-way race for first place with the Vikings and two other teams.

Since the Vikings were bombed by UBC two weeks ago they have undergone some minor changes.

Break Dave Smirl has been promoted from the Norsemen to the first team, and Norsemen centre Bruce Panton is now running in the Viking backfield while Gary Johnson nurses a leg injury.

* * *

The varsity hockey squad is currently holding down first place in its division and is looking stronger with every performance.

The hockey Vikings will start intercollegiate play in a little less than three weeks, when Brandon University comes to Victoria on Nov. 20th.

The Vikings were a little shaky at the start of the season, but are settling down now, and look like they have the potential to become the strongest team Uvic has ever put on the ice.

The Vikings used to practice at 6 in the morning, but players found they had trouble staying awake in class. Athletics director Bob Bell said that because of this new practice times had to be arranged. The squad now works out in the evenings, and are reportedly much happier with the new arrangements.

* * *

The basketball teams are not into any league play as yet, and will not be for some time.

On Nov. 20th, the men's squad will be in Regina to meet the University of Saskatchewan for their opening game of the WCIAA season.

Viketts, the women's senior team, will be there a week later, to open their season.

The big sports action this weekend will be out of town.

* * *

The cross-country team, led by Charlie Thorne, who captured the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association 10,000-metre crown last week in Winnipeg, will participate in the National Cross-Country Championships in Edmonton on Saturday.

The Uvic water polo team will travel to Portland to take part in the second annual Small College Water Polo Tournament, to be held there this Friday and Saturday.

Fast-Starting Phil Reaches Milestone

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins has become the 42nd player in National Hockey Leabue history to record more than 500 regular-season points.

But in addition to that feat, Esposito appears to be taking dead aim at his one-season record of 126 points, an all-time NHL high he set two seasons ago.

After Boston's first nine games this season, Esposito has 19 points, including a league leading 12 assists. In the 1968-69 season when he set the 126-point scoring record, Esposito had only four goals, four assists and eight points in the first nine games.

So far the rangy centre from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has picked up at least one point in eight of Boston's nine games. The only time he failed to record a point was Oct. 18 at Vancouver as the Bruins beat the Canucks 5-3.

Esposito leads team-mate John McKenzie by three points in the current scoring race. Another Boston right winger — Ken Hodge — is third with 14 points, two fewer than McKenzie and one more than centre Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens.

THREE-FOR-ONE DEAL SENDS FLOOD TO NATS

THE WASHINGTON POST

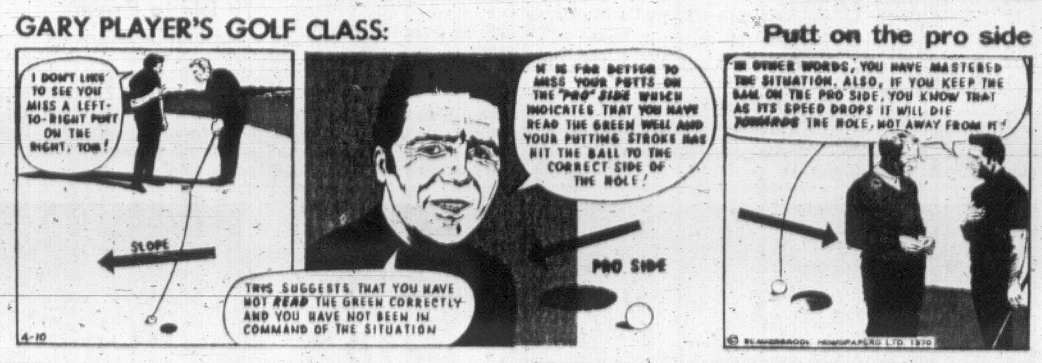

WASHINGTON — The last technical obstacle in the way of the acquisition of outfielder Curt Flood by the Washington Senators was cleared away Tuesday when baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn approved a straight-player deal with the Philadelphia Phillies. No cash was involved.

The signing of Flood, who still has an anti-trust suit pending in the appeals court challenging baseball's reserve clause, is only a formality and will be announced at a press conference later this month.

In acquiring the 32-year-old outfielder who was idle all last season, the Senators traded outfielder Greg Goossen, 25, first baseman Gene Martin, 23, and right-handed pitcher Jeff Terpko, 20. Goossen and Terpko immediately were assigned to the Phillies' top farm club at Eugene, Ore., in the Pacific Coast League. Martin will stay on the major-league roster.

Coffey, Abendschan Point-Scoring Champs

(Times News Services)

Place-kicker Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan Roughriders and Tommy Joe Coffey, the all-round handyman with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, are the Canadian Football League's 1970 scoring champions.

Abendschan kicked only three converts in Saskatchewan's final game, a 33-13 victory over B.C. Lions. But it was enough to boost his point total to 116, nine more than Ted Gerela of the Lions, his nearest rival in the Western Conference.

Gerela picked up seven points in the game on two field goals and a single, and eased into second place one point ahead of Edmonton Eskimo place-kicker Dave Cutler. Fourth place went to Calgary Stampeder Larry Robinson, far back with 74 points.

ALL-TIME LEADER

Coffey topped the Eastern Conference with 113 points, 13 more than Toronto Argonauts' Don Jonas.

Coffey, completing his 11th season in the Canadian League with Hamilton and Edmonton Eskimos, now has a career total of 847 points on 55 touchdowns, 178 converts, 97 field goals and 48 singles. He is the nation's all-time leading scorer.

Italian Skater Captures Crown

LONDON (CP) — Rita Trapanese, 20-year-old Italian champion, turned in a brilliant display of free skating to win the Richmond International Trophy women's figure-skating competition Monday night.

Mary McCaffery of North Vancouver placed ninth.

Miss Trapanese, rated the most-accomplished free skater in the field of 23 girls before the event started, beat out Pat Dodd, 22-year-old British champion who was the leader after the compulsory figures.

Dawn Glab of the United States placed third.

Hungarians Want Verdicts Revised

BUDAPEST (AP) — The Hungarian Weightlifting Association said today it is demanding an extraordinary congress of the international association to "revise the decisions" at the 1970 world championships which took the medals away from three Hungarians who were charged with dope-taking.

The Hungarian statement said the three Hungarians were wrongly accused in the 1970 championships in Columbus, Ohio.

Canadian Grid Grads NFL's Newest Coaches

By The Canadian Press

Two men who appeared in the Canadian Football League during 1954 were named interim head coaches in the National Football League Tuesday at Boston and New Orleans.

John Mazur, a tailback with British Columbia Lions in their first season under coach Annis Stukus, replaced ailing John Rush at Boston.

J. D. Roberts, an all-America lineman at Oklahoma before joining Hamilton Tiger-Cats, took over from Tom Fears, fired Tuesday by New Orleans Saints.

A statement by Boston Patriots said Rush was being given a leave of absence for health reasons. He was stricken by tachycardia, an increase in the heart beat, just before last Sunday's Buffalo Bills game.

The Bills won 45-10, leaving Boston with a 1-6 won-loss record this season. The Patriots won four and lost 10 under Rush last year, his first with the team.

CHOSE OWN MAN

Patriots president Billy Sullivan, in naming Mazur as interim coach, said "it didn't make sense to go outside the fold" in their search for a new leader.

Mazur, who had previously been an offensive coach with the Bills, was the first assistant hired by Rush when he became Boston's head coach in February, 1969.

Rush, when he heard of his leave of absence, loudly disclaimed the announcement, saying that he had resigned at midnight Monday night.

John Mecom Jr., majority owner of the Saints, announced the elevation of Roberts, who had been coaching the Richmond, Va., team in the Atlantic Coast Football League.

Roberts, an all-American in 1953, spurned offers from Green Bay Packers who selected him in the player draft and joined Hamilton Tiger-Cats, then managed and coached by Carl Voyles.

He was the highest-rated U.S. college graduate to play in the CFL to that time, having been named U.S. college's Lineman of the Year by the wire services and Look magazine.

Under contest rules, bowler with highest single game in tying series is declared winner.

Judge Rules Smythe 'Not Treated Fairly'

TORONTO (CP) — A decision by a York County court judge to quash five charges of tax evasion against hockey executive Stafford Smythe could reach the Supreme Court of Canada.

Norman Chalmers, director of the federal justice department's regional office, said Tuesday that in an order for Judge Joseph Kelly to try the case was not obtained from the Ontario Supreme Court or the Ontario Appeal Court, leave might be sought to go to the country's highest court.

Chalmers said he had instructed special prosecutor Joseph Sedgwick to seek "as soon as possible" a mandamus order requiring Judge Kelly to go ahead with the trial which involves the alleged failure to pay income tax on the total of $278,000. He expected the mandamus hearing to be held withing two weeks.

In seeking the order the department will argue that Judge Kelly was "in error" in ruling that the section of the Income Tax Act under which the charges against Smythe were laid was contrary to the Canadian Bill of Rights.

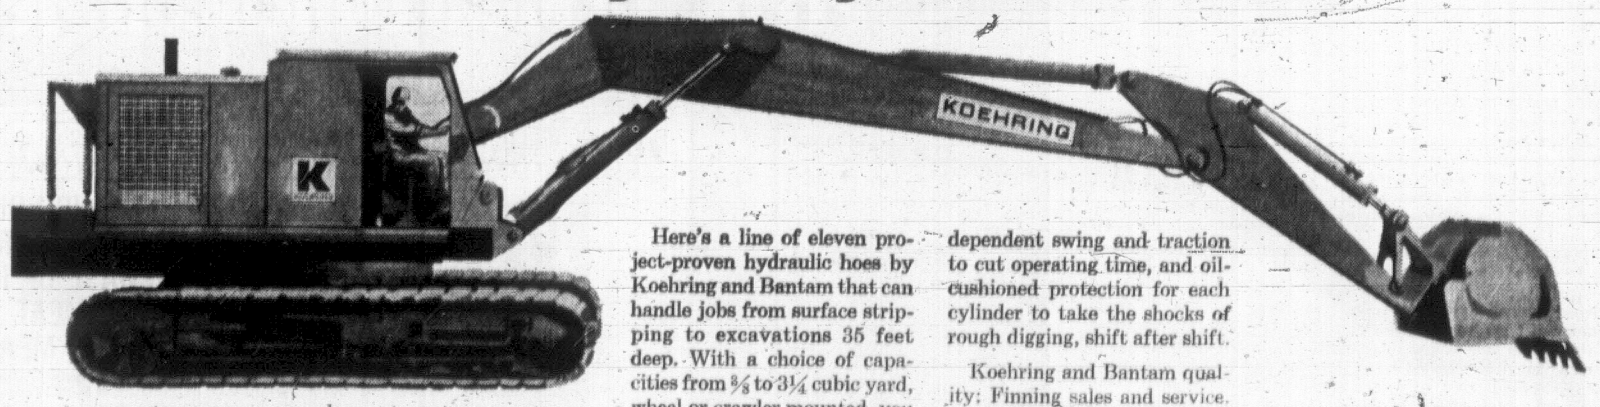

HEADS LEAFS

Smythe, president of Maple Leaf Hockey Cub, is charged with evading payment on income tax between 1965 and 1968 and with making false statements in tax returns covering 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967.

In court Monday Judge Kelly upheld the argument put forward by Smythe's lawyer, J. J. Robinette, that Smythe had not been treated fairly when the justice department proceeded against him by way of indictment — which makes a jail sentence mandatory on conviction — rather than by summary trial in which a fine alone may be imposed on conviction.

Judge Kelly said these sections of the act had the effect of treating one person more harshly than another while the Bill of Rights stated that all persons are equal before the law unless exclusions are set out.

Democrats Oust 12 Republican Governors

WASHINGTON (AP)—In simple numbers, and in states where state house control adds clout for the 1972 presidential drive, it was Democrats nearly all the way Tuesday.

They ousted at least 12 Republicans from governorships, while giving up only two. The turn in Democratic fortunes, after a steady decline in state house occupancy in the 1960s, was the most dramatic development in Tuesday's election.

State houses were at stake in 35 states. Republicans went into the voting with a 32 to 18 edge.

The governorships of California and New York, the biggest trophies in the bag, eluded the Democrats. But they scored important victories in the other big states: Ohio, Florida, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, all previously in Republican hands and all the recipients of campaign visits by President Nixon, Vice-President Spiro T. Angew—or both.

Republicans unseated Democrats only in Connecticut and Tennessee. Both were expected.

SUCCESS UNEXPLAINABLE

It was difficult to explain the Democratic success only in terms of the national campaign themes of the two parties. Local issues and personalities often overrode the Republican law-and-order thrust as well as the economic emphasis of the Democrats.

In early morning, with a few governorships still undecided, the results of Tuesday's elections looked like this:

Democrats: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Kansas, Maryland, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Wisconsin.

Republicans: Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Oregon, Tennessee, Vermont and Wyoming.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, who campaigned in 22 of the 35 states that elected governors, called the election outcome bittersweet. The sweet, he indicated, was what he called the "working majority" the president now has in the Senate with the Republican-southern Democrat coalition.

The bitter, Agnew said, is "seeing so many men I knew well as the governor of Maryland losing in their gubernatorial races.

Among those who lost re-election bids were Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas, Claude Kirk of Florida, Don Samuelson of Idaho, Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma, Norbert Tiemann of Nebraska and Frank Farrar of South Dakota—all Republicans.

TWO WIN EASILY

Republican Nelson A. Rockefeller had no difficulty in winning a fourth four-year term as governor of New York, setting a modern record. Neither did Ronald Reagan of California. Their opponents were Arthur Goldberg, former Supreme Court justice, in New York, and Jess Unruh, former Democratic assembly speaker, in California.

Other Republicans who renewed leases on governors' mansions were Francisc Sargent of Massachusetts—a state neither Nixon nor Agnew visited, by request—Walter Peterson of New Hampshire, Deane Davis of Vermont, Robert Ray of Iowa, John Love of Colorado and Stanley Hathaway of Wyoming.

Robert Docking, Kansas' Democratic governor, did what his father couldn't do before him: he was elected to an unprecedented third two-year term in a notably Republican state.

Maryland's Marvin Mandel, a Democrat named governor by the state legislature to fill Agnew's term, easily won election. Democrat John Burns of Hawaii also was re-elected.

So was Preston Smith of Texas, another Democrat who had to withstand a Nixon-Agnew campaign onslaught.

WALLACE RETURNS

Among the new faces in state houses was a familiar one—Alabama's governor of Alabama from 1963 through 1967, had no Republican opposition. But a black challenger, Dr. John Cashin, got about 100,000 votes. Wallace's was at least five times that number as he regained his power base.

In Georgia, Democrat Jimmy Carter followed the ineligible Lester Maddox into the governor's chair, taking Maddox along as lieutenant-governor. Hal Suit, a former television newscaster who had the help of the Nixon-Agnew team, trailed far behind.

Right-Winger Grabs New York

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Right-wing Senator-elect James L. Buckley emerged today as the star of the New York state election, overshadowing such events as Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's trouncing of Arthur Goldberg and the renewal of Republican control of the state legislature.

Rockefeller and his teammates ran pretty much according to form, although the governor's nearly 700,000-vote plurality was larger than expected.

It was Buckley who provided the excitement and suspense in the tallying of Tuesday's votes, bringing electoral triumph to the splinter Conservative party in the U.S. Senate race.

Buckley, an avowed supporter of President Nixon, undoubtedly evoked smiles in the White House by ending the Senate career of incumbent Charles E. Goodell, the unorthodox Liberal Republican who finished last in the three-man race.

Forging in coalition of conservative-minded voters, Buckley produced a narrow minority win over runnerup Richard L. Ottinger, the Democratic congressman who had competed with Goodell for the more liberal majority vote.

The result was an indicated plurality of about 150,000 votes for the 47-year-old businessman, an enrolled Republican who had entered the campaign as a distinct underdog.

Nearly-complete returns gave Buckley 2,250,044 votes, or 39 per cent, Ottinger 2,111,828, or 37 per cent, and Goodell 1,431,374, or 24 per cent.

Meanwhile, Rockefeller rolled to an easy victory over Goldberg, the former U.S. Supreme Court justice and ambassador to the United Nations. Making his first try for elective office, Goldberg was thought to be leading early in the campaign, but Rockefeller finished strong.

In winning an unprecedented year-old governor ran better than ever.

Goldberg, also 62, had been rated his toughest opponent, but the governor's plurality far exceeded any he had compiled in his previous victories.

With 98 per cent of the vote counted, Rockefeller had 3,078,893, or 53 per cent, and Goldberg had 2,390,352, or 40 per cent. Conservative party candidate Paul L. Admams finished a distant third, with 417,027, or seven per cent.

Mothers Back Home After Caretakers End School Strike

EDMONTON (CP) — Hundreds of mothers return to their housework today after two days of cleaning school floors and toilets and helping out in the boiler rooms while 1,100 caretakers and maintenance workers at Edmonton's public schools were on strike.

The strike, which started Oct. 22, ended Tuesday and all public schools were to open today. Forty-one of them had been operating Tuesday using volunteers, mainly mothers of school children, to replace the strikers. The volunteers were paid $2 an hour.

The negotiators for the school board and the Canadian Union of Public Employees—bargaining agents for the 1,100 strikers—agreed to a suggestion by the board of industrial relations that the contract dispute be placed before a single arbitrator.

The arbitrator, still to be named by the board of industrial relations, is to make an award which will be binding on both parties.

HAD ENFORCED HOLIDAY

The union members endorsed the action of their negotiating committee at a meeting Tuesday.

Some 77,000 students had six days of enforced holidays before 20 of the 150 public schools were re-opened with volunteers on Monday. An additional 21 were re-opened Tuesday.

Before the school board withdrew its final offer, the sides were within three per cent of each other on wage offers in a two-year package deal.

The board had offered the 500 male caretakers average increases of $924 in a contract expiring on Dec. 31, 1971, bringing average annual earnings to $6,356.

The 300 maintenance workers make about $4 an hour. Fringe benefits, not wages, were the main issues in their contract dispute.

Both sides had agreed that the 300 women caretakers should receive two-stage, retroactive increases bringing their wages to $2 an hour. They earned $1.65 under the previous contract.

Share of Power Poverty Remedy

OTTAWA (CP) — Poverty is fundamentally a problem of inequality in the distribution of both wealth and power, the Manitoba government told the Senate committee today in a brief.

It said eradication of poverty required simultaneous action to redistribute wealth and power.

"Such action will involve changes in the existing social order—in those institutions and mechanisms which distribute wealth and power in ways that maintain and reinforce the vast inequalities of today," the brief said.

"Changes in financial assistance and social services are necessary, but alone will have limited effects in eliminating poverty."

The brief said poverty cannot be erased by any one government department but must involve all departments. Poverty also was best tackled within the contest of over-all social development.

The brief said Manitoba is trying to establish a social development approach to government planning. It recommended that since poverty is a national problem, the federal government also move towards such an approach.

GIVES IDEAS

Suggestions for specific anti-poverty approaches included:

—A comprehensive investment policy;

—Preventive programs to deal with "the power redistribution aspects of poverty," including support for the efforts to create an environment where workers could participate directly in the management and decision-making of their plant;

—Operational decentralization of government with decisions made at the lowest possible level to enable government power to be more responsive and accountable to the people;

—A "truly progressive" taxation system;

—Separation of financial assistance from the provision of other social services.

The brief supported the basic concept of a guaranteed annual income, but cautioned that such an income would be only one element in an effective fight against poverty. It would also cost more than existing financial assistance and there was no assurance that it would effectively redistribute financial resources.

SHIPWORKERS ACCEPT 2-YEAR, 88-CENT HIKE

Shipyard workers in Victoria and Vancouver have voted to accept terms in a new two-year contract, a union spokesman announced today.

Tradesmen will receive a 45-cent-an-hour increase the first year and 43 cents-an-hour the second, said Tom Wheatley, business manager for the plumbers' union in Victoria and one of the spokesmen for the Joint Shipyard Conference.

Fringe benefits bring the value of the increase to 98 cents an hour over the two years.

The conference is a grouping of 12 local unions plus unions in Vancouver which bargain jointly with the Yarrows-Burrard group.

Unions include the boilermakers, carpenters, dock and ship workers, electricians, machinists, office employees, plumbers and operating engineers. Twenty-two unions in the two cities are involved.

Wheatley said about 200 workers are affected in Victoria and 314 in Vancouver. Their last contract expired Oct. 14.

The unions had voted earlier and representatives tabulated results today. "A good majority" favored settlement.

Rail Line Loser

EDMONTON (CP) — John P. Kelsall, director of cost analysis for Canadian Pacific Railway, said Tuesday the company cannot operate a passenger train service between Edmonton and Calgary and make money or break even.

The CPR has applied to the Canadian Transport Commission to discontinue the service, which now consists of one rail diesel car running each way daily.

Kelsall told a public hearing being held by the commission's railway transport committee that the Edmonton-Calgary run lost an estimated $192,200 in the first six months of 1970.

Ontario Too Late On Ryerson Offer

TORONTO (CP) — The general manager of Ryerson Press said Tuesday he suggested a joint-venture proposal to the provincial government, aimed at preventing sale to a branch of a United States company, but the sale went through while the government was still considering the matter.

Gavin Clark said Stanley Randall, Ontario trade and development minister, "seemed interested" in the proposal presented to him as "a sort of pilot project" two weeks ago.

Sale of the publishing house to McGraw-Hill of Canada Ltd. was announced Monday by its owners, the United Church of Canada.

In an interview, Mr. Clark said of the government's consideration of the joint-venture proposal: "I doubt they realized then how little time there was left."

Earlier Tuesday, Rev. F. C. Brisbin, secretary of the church's communications division, said the government had made no direct offer of aid to the church to help it retain the publishing house.

He was replying to a statement by Mr. Randall to the legislature Monday that he had asked Ryerson to present financial statements so that help could be considered, but that Ryerson never responded.

Tuesday, Mr. Randall told the legislature the government is pursuing "a new line of thought" which might mean help for Canadian book-publishing firms faced with foreign takeovers. He declined to elaborate.

The conference will focus on non-print forms of teaching aids — projectors, tape recorders, photography and other materials.

L.E.A.R.N. is a clearing house of news on educational research and innovation. It is co-sponsored by all Island school districts and the University of Victoria.

SECRETARY FOUND GUILTY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ida Vicky Coffill was remanded Tuesday to Nov. 23 for sentencing after being found guilty of stealing $1,067 from mayor Tom Campbell's rental agency.

Provincial Judge Gordon Johnson said he found ample evidence to convict the 36-year-old former bookkeeper and private secretary and that she had a motive for theft.

She was charged with taking the money from Harwood Agencies.

George Pastor and son, Bryan, on Back of Fire Truck

They Didn't Like Watching Fires

By DONNA CLEMENTS

DUNCAN — After Sahtlam and district residents stood and watched two houses burn down they decided last April it was time they had a fire department.

Now they have organized a fire protection system, acquired a fire truck and have started building a fire hall.

"Now we can at least attempt to fight a fire," said George Pastor, 27, chairman of the fire protection system.

Sahtlam, an unorganized district five miles west of Duncan, has 180 homes in a radius of five miles.

The system's first project was to conduct a door-to-door campaign of Sahtlam residents in which they collected over $2,000 in pledges.

The six volunteer fire departments in the Cowichan Valley have given guidance and donated hoses, nozzles, sirens and a portable pump.

"They said they will help train our members," Pastor said.

The 10 active men in the system have made a donated gas truck and a 1952 tank truck, which they purchased, into a 800-gallon fire truck.

Now the Sahtlam men are constructing a cement block fire hall on two acres on Lake Cowichan Road they have leased from the government for $25 annually.

"The hall is being built from money raised and donations," explained Pastor. "We started building last Saturday and had over 20 men out to work on it."

The two-storey fire hall will house two truck bays, a meeting room and a workshop downstairs and a recreation room upstairs.

The fire protection system's women's auxiliary has held several socials to help raise funds for the project.

B.C. Tree Seeds Reach Standards

New international regulations covering tree seeds exported from BC. have been met by the province's four major suppliers—and could force U.S. seed extractors to set up plants here.

The four major exporters were told earlier this year that their seeds would not be acceptable for sale in a number of European countries unless they were certified under standards adopted by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Chief objective of the program is to ensure that buyers get authentic information about the origin of the seeds.

Although Canada had been a member of OECD since it was formed in 1961, and helped draw up the seed control regulations, it had not officially adopted the program.

When the countries, including the major importers of Britain, Denmark and West Germany, announced the standards were now mandatory, B.C. exporters asked the federal government to enter the scheme.

MORE PROVISIONS

Standards being enforced deal with source identification of tree seed. Provisions to be adopted later will cover who is collecting the seed cones, how they are transported and where extraction plants are located.

The Canadian standards will apply only to seed extracted in this country, so Washington exporters who collect seed in B.C. will not be eligible for certification here. This has already forced one Washington company to set up an extraction plant in B.C.

Value of the B.C. forest seed industry was $100,000 in 1968.

Plumbers Vote Yes On New Pact

VANCOUVER (CP)—A nine month contract dispute between British Columbia contractors and local 170 of the Plumbers' and Pipefitters' Union has been settled, spokesmen for both parties said Tuesday.

In a joint statement, C. M. Connaghan, president of Construction Labor Relations Association, and union negotiator Russ St. Eloi of Toronto said the 3,000-member local approved a two-year agreement, effective last May 15.

The total wage increase, including fringe benefits, is $1 hourly. The base rate goes to $5.66 effective May 15 and to $6.65 by Oct. 1, 1971.

A union spokesman said 1,898 members voted on the proposal, with a two to one margin in favor.

The old contract expired March 31.

Lawyer Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gerald Vincent Pelton, an 82-year-old city lawyer, pleaded guilty in provincial court Tuesday to six counts of conspiracy, breach of trust and theft. Pelton, who lives at a Salvation Army hostel, admitted misappropriating funds totalling $297,000 from estates he was administering.

RCMP Start Crackdown On Speeders

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — RCMP issued 116 speeding tickets in October in the Mill Bay-Malahat area.

A police spokesman said they probably issued an equal number of warnings.

"The public can be warned that we will be working radar more in that area," he said.

Radar was responsible for 109 of the speeding tickets and 80 per cent of these were issued in the half-mile 40 m.p.h. zone on the Trans-Canada Highway through Mill Bay and Bamberton.

Coho Catch Wasn't American Director Tells Fishermen

Coho salmon moved south from Vancouver Island's Big Bank to feed off the west coast of Washington State this year — but moved back up through the Strait of Juan de Fuca to give the Fraser River one of the biggest runs in history.

"This shoots down statements by Port Alberni fishermen that they were catching all American fish and would have had a bad season this year without catches provided by the American hatcheries," Rod Hourston, regional director of the federal fisheries department, said Tuesday.

A large part of their catch was from stock on their way to the Strait of Juan de Fuca, Hourston said.

"Since most coho hatcheries are on the Columbia River, these fish were returning to spawning grounds in Puget Sound and Canadian rivers, including the Fraser."

FEED PLENTIFUL

Hourston said oceanic conditions this year lured island west coast coho to the Washington coast, where feed was plentiful. He said coho catches off the Big Bank to the end of September totalled 224,000, as against 513,000 last year.

"In contrast, there have been 570,000 coho caught off the west coast of Washington, as against 63,000 for the same period in 1969," Hourston said, "but large numbers of these salmon moved up through the strait."

A reciprocal fishing agreement between Canada and the United States gives Americans trolling privileges off the three-mile limit on the west coast of the Island, and Canadian trollers the same privilege off the west coast of Washington.

"And to keep the picture in focus, it must be remembered that under a treaty arrangement the Americans harvest 50 per cent of the Fraser River sockeye and pink salmon which enter the strait," Hourston said.

"In addition, large numbers of Canadian chinooks, coho and chum salmon are taken in this fishery. We know that the U.S. catch of Fraser River coho at Point Roberts was a record this year."

POLICE COURT

Eva Mitchell, 59, of 924 Empress, was fined $300 and sentenced to 75 days in jail when she pleaded guilty to shoplifting at three different stores Monday.

She stole a wallet worth $7, a compact and a rain bonnet and a rubber insole from The Bay, Woolworth's and Kresge's.

"Something must be done about this indiscriminate stealing and thievery that is going on," said St. Jorre.

Science Guides Advanced

OTTAWA (CP) — The Science Council of Canada has suggested some guides for professional societies to follow in making proposals for federal financial support to costly science projects.

Its views, although addressed to the Canadian Association of Physicists, also are expected to have considerable impact on major space projects now under study. These include a co-operative space platform proposed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration of the United States and the launching of a Canadian resources satellite.

An open letter to the physicists from council chairman Dr. O. M. Solandt also reviews the science council's advice to the government, some of it unpublished until now, on several major science projects in recent years.

The council's letter was made public Tuesday and appears in Physics in Canada, the professional journal of the association of physicists.

The science council is unenthusiastic about expensive international projects.

It says internationally-shared facilities are not generally productive from a national viewpoint unless there is a strong home base.

Such projects also are harder to assess and meet greater difficulty in getting approval than do strictly national science ventures.

The council says that where one partner shares only a small portion of the total cost, use of the facilities often becomes dependent on the good graces of the major partner.

Inevitably, there is uncertainty about the right of first utilization of technological discoveries associated with the project.

Eastern Park 'Threatened By Logging'

TORONTO (CP) — A former member of the advisory committee to Rene Brunelle, minister of lands and forests, said Tuesday night Quetico provincial park is in danger of being spoiled as a primitive area because of extensive logging.

Gavin Henderson was speaking to an audience of more than 500 at St. Lawrence Hall. The meeting was called in the interests of the newly-formed Citizens' Committee to Prevent the Destruction of Quetico.

The 1,750 square miles of wilderness park is 120 miles west of Thunder Bay.

Supporting the motion that all logging operations cease in the park were Bruce Littlejohn of the Ontario Committee of National and Provincial Parks Associations and Prof. D. H. Pimlott of the University of Toronto zoology department.

Deputy Minister G. H. Bayly of the department of lands and forests and A. Fleming, a vice-president of Domtar Pulp and Paper Products Ltd. opposed the motion. Domtar has logging permits allowing it to cut timber in the park.

Some booing greeted a statement from Mr. Bayly that the only way to keep the park beautiful lay in "good forest management." He and Mr. Fleming said that leaving the park as a wilderness with no regulated commercial forest operation would lead to decay of the forest.

After the meeting Mr. Fleming said Domtar is selling its Quetico park holdings to the Ontario and Minnesota Lumber Co. based in Cascade, Ohio.

He said the sale was made because the company is based close to the park.

NEW LOWER PHOSPHATE LEVER DETERGENTS GET THE BIG OK!

OK says Mrs. A. McKinley of St. Lambert, Quebec.

"With Breeze I've always been satisfied with my nice clean wash. I've tried the new lower phosphate Breeze and my clothes are just as clean as ever. And I always like to get the towel inside. Breeze is still my choice."

OK says Mrs. K. Tippett of St. Vital, Manitoba.

"I liked the idea of a really good detergent and a stain remover working together. So I used Drive. Now that I have tried the new lower phosphate formula, I shall go on using it. It doesn't seem to have changed Drive's ability to give me a clean stain-free wash, and that's all I want."

OK says Mrs. L. Logan of Pictou, Nova Scotia.

"Surf has always been a good buy. I have tried the new lower phosphate formula. It still gets my clothes really clean and I'm saving money too. So I will stay with Surf."

OK says Mrs. W. McKenney of Burlington, Ontario.

"I like a powerful detergent that will give me a really white, really clean wash. So in the past I've used OMO. Now that I've tried the new formula I will certainly go on using it. It certainly gets the big O.K. from me."

OK says Mrs. F. Dunfield of Vancouver, B.C.

"I first started using "all" when we lived in the interior of B.C. The water was hard there and "all" gave me very satisfactory results. Also the concentrated action of "all" made it easier on my automatic washer. I have used "all" regularly since. The new low-phosphate "all" seems to wash just as well and is O.K. by me."

Effective August 1st, 1970, all Lever detergents began to be manufactured with reduced phosphate levels. All these famous Lever brands, Breeze, Omo, "all", Surf and Drive. All of them with reduced phosphate levels. All of them offering you high quality results.

We gave each of these ladies an advanced pack of their favourite Lever laundry detergent, with the new lower phosphate formula. They tried them, and they all agreed. New lower phosphate Lever detergents do a really great job with substitute materials. Lever research will continue to try to find ways to lower the phosphate levels in all their brands. When this can be done and the high quality performance maintained, Lever will make these products available to you with all possible speed.

Guide Adopted

EDMONTON (CP) — The World Health Organization's definition of health as a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being has been adopted by Alberta physicians as a guide to therapeutic abortions, Dr. Bob Clark, Alberta Medical Association Executive secretary, said Tuesday.

Drugs Are Symptom

EDMONTON (CP) — No massive school program can counter or eliminate the drug problem, delegates to the convention of the Alberta School Trustees Association were told Tuesday.

Dr. David MacDougall, supervisor of guidance with Edmonton Roman Catholic schools, said the problem is not drugs themselves, but the reasons behind the abuse of drugs by youth.

"Drug use is a sympton of deeper social ills, and we should concern ourselves with solving those social ills before we can attempt to solve the drug problem," he said.

Publicity Urged

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — The juvenile crime rate could be lowered if juvenile trials were opened to the public and news media, police chief David A. McNamee told a service club luncheon Tuesday. He said it is time for for a change in juvenile laws.

Terms Come Later

WINNIPEG (CP) — A three-man arbitration board Tuesday awarded the Winnipeg Teachers' Association a two-year contract, terms of which will be decided later.

The board, which began hearings Aug. 12, is expected to decide on the complete, and compulsory, contract terms before Christmas.

The Winnipeg school board had proposed a one-year contract as opposed to the two-year recommendation of the Teachers' Association.

'Power Name Of Game' —Atkinson

SASKATOON (CP) — Power is the name of the farming game today, Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmers Union, said Tuesday.

He told an NFU regional meeting the union has achieved many things for western farmers in the last year.

"These things didn't happen by people sitting home twiddling their thumbs; they came about when you put your tractors on the highways and marched on the legislatures."

Atkinson said Alberta farmers are getting double the prices they used to for fescue seed because of the union's picketing of fescue buyers.

Progress also has been made on getting fair prices for farmers whose lands are used by oil exploration, pipeline and telephone companies. But more fighting had to be done in the area of surface rights.

PGE Defers Wage Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific Great Eastern Railway and 102 enginemen have deferred contract negotiations pending settlement of national contract terms by Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

A PGE spokesman said Tuesday that, as usual, the final settlement with the provincially-owned railway "will be negotiated within the terms of the national settlement."

CNR and CP Rail were asked by about 85,000 employees on Monday for pay increases ranging from 16 to more than 40 per cent in two years. The railways said the demands are "highly inflationary."

IWA Talks Stalled

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Contract talks between the International Woodworkers of America and the Northern Interior Lumbermen's Association broke down Tuesday.

But mediator Clive McKee said both sides agreed to extend the mediation term to midnight Saturday.

IWA western regional president Jack Moore said no decision has yet been made on whether further talks will be held this week.

About 1,500 woodworkers are seeking a pay increase of 84 cents an hour in two years on a base rate of $2.88.

Liberal's Defeat Major Nixon Victory

By BILL RAWLINS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Nixon administration achieved a major goal of its 1970 election strategy when a conservative congressman dumped Albert Gore, a liberal Democrat, from the United States Senate and a Republican was elected governor of Tennessee for the first time in 50 years.

Representative William E. Brock, 39, whose election to Congress in 1962 launched the Republican party on its way to major party status in the state, soundly beat Gore, 62, who had served in Congress since 1938 and was seeking his fourth term in the Senate.

Completing the Republican sweep of statewide offices Tuesday was Winfield Dunn, a 43-year-old dentist who defeated John J. Hooker for the governorship.

Republicans also retained their four seats in the U.S. House of Representatives but failed to unseat Democrats from their five. Democrats apparently regained control of the state House of Representatives, which they lost two years ago, and held on to their margin in the state Senate.

Returns from 99 per cent of the state's 2,491 voting districts gave Brock 553,158 votes to 508,925 for Gore. Dunn had 564,888 votes to 502,930 for Hooker.

President Nixon and Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew had campaigned in Tennessee on behalf of the winners.

Gore was a prime target of the Republicans because of his opposition to Nixon's Indochina war policies, the president's economic policies and the nominations of G. Harrold Carswell and Clement F. Haynsworth to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Nixon Ally, Murphy Defeated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Representative John V. Tunney's defeat of California Senator George Murphy adds a newcomer with a touch of Kennedy political style and vigor to the next Senate's Democratic lineup.

Tunney bucked a Republican law-and-order campaign blitz led by President Nixon in defeating Murphy in Tuesday's election.

Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan won a second four-year term. But his margin over Democrat Jess Unruh fell short of the 900,000-vote edge he received four years ago over the then Democratic incumbent, Gov. Edmund Brown.

Democrat Tunney, 36, son of former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, said his victory "represents a rejection of the politics of fear." He accused Murphy, 68, of waging "the dirtiest campaign I've ever seen," including exploitation of last Thursday's rock-and-egg throwing at Nixon's limousine at San Jose.

TUNNEY
. . . vigorous style

Murphy, like Reagan a former Hollywood star, went to bed Tuesday night saying in a voice left hoarse by a 1965 operation for throat cancer: "I can't find it in my heart to concede."

Reagan, 59, retired without claiming victory although he held a comfortable lead over Unruh, former speaker of the state assembly who attacked Reagan as the "front man" for special interests such as oilmen and insurance firms.

Tunney's victory gives California two Democratic U.S. senators for the first time since before the American Civil War. Alan Cranston was elected two years ago.

Tunney, who regards his University of Virginia law school roommate, Senator Edward M. Kennedy (Dem.-Mass.), his best friend, said he thought Nixon's campaign appearances for Murphy backfired.

"The president and the vice-president decided to use the politics of fear to gain a short-term advantage," said Tunney. "It weakened their statures nationally."

Tunney has called for withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Vietnan in 1971.

With 56 per cent of the voting districts reporting, Tunney led Murphy 1,879,265 to 1,521,797.

Reagan led Unruh 1,841,452 to 1,558,556.

Representative John H. Rousselot, former official of the John Birch Society, won a full term in the House of Representatives over Myrlie B. Evers, widow of slain civil rights leader Medgar Evers. Rousselot defeated Mrs. Evers last summer in a special election to fill a vacancy.

From Bea Wright's Kitchen

MARSHMAL-O FUDGE

2¼ Cups sugar
⅔ cups canned milk
1 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
¼ cup butter
5 ozs. marshmallow creme

Mix together in a heavy, 2-qt. saucepan, sugar, butter, canned milk and marshmallow creme. Bring to a bubbling boil quickly, stirring continuously. Reduce to medium heat when bubbles appear all over the top, stir 5 minutes. Remove from heat and add chocolate chips. Stir until chips are melted and blended into the mixture. Pour into greased 9-inch square pan. Decorate top with pecan or walnut halves. Cool thoroughly. Cut into 1½" squares. Yields 3 dozen squares or 2 lbs.

From Bea Wright

Who can resist the temptation of a chocolate creme pie or crunchy chocolate chip cookies or a chocolate devil's food cake? When it comes to chocolate there is no age barrier. It rates as a popular favourite with all ages.

Often we have inquiries from homemakers asking what the difference is between the various types of chocolate used in recipes. Here we've mentioned six of the most used ones.

BAKING CHOCOLATE
An unsweetened chocolate liquor used for baking and cooking: comes molded in 1-oz. bars and is customarily melted for recipe use.

SEMI-SWEET CHOCOLATE
Made by adding sugar, extra cocoa butter and flavourings to unsweetened chocolate. Used for baking, dipping and eating out of hand.

SWEET CHOCOLATE
Still more sugar is added. Comes in bar form to be eaten as candy or for recipe use.

MILK CHOCOLATE
A sweet chocolate to which milk has been added, making a light mild flavoured chocolate, used mainly for candy bars or eating candies.

COCOA
Obtained from chocolate liquor by removing some of the cocoa butter and then milling the resultant product into very fine powder form.

DUTCH PROCESS COCOA
Cocoa is treated with alkali in the processing to produce a darker, richer brown colour.

CHOCOLATE COCOA SUBSTITUTION
1 oz. chocolate, 3 tables cocoa, plus 1 tbles fat.

Computer Keeps Track Of Hemline That Sells

NEW YORK (UPI) — A fashion firm that follows the dictates of customers via continuous computerized monitoring is keeping hemlines over the knee, at the midcalf, and, sometimes, down to the floor for spring.

The obedience to computer reports on customer tastes was reflected throughout the spring collection of the Joan Leslie Fashions Inc., designed by Kasper.

John Pomerantz, president of the Joan Leslie division of Leslie Fay Inc., a fashion conglomerate with nine subdivisions, said the midcalf and below-the-knee hem lengths were also in the Kasper-designated fall and winter offerings.

"We've been great," he said, making note of the fact that this variety of lengths hasn't hurt business in the current fashion season.

Pomerantz said in its price range, $75 to $225, the firm is the biggest in the market.

"Via our computers we know what is selling and what is selling well in various sections of the country," he said.

He indicated that the modus operandi must be correct, for the firm's stock hasn't slumped like that of some other fashion houses.

For spring, the Kasper collection reflects also the effect of flower children in their granny dresses — shaping up as one influence for late afternoon and evening clothes.

The high necked, long-sleeved, floor-sweeping dresses are reminiscent of styles worn by women at the turn of the century. In other fashion shows during the last several weeks, the old-fashioned style made new fashioned by the flower children cropped up repeatedly.

Fashion accents with these and other country girl outfits include white boots with floral patterns appliqued on them, shoulder-wide straw hats — and more.

Some had skull-hugging head covering adorned with strings of colored beads and chains of sparkling ornaments.

British Put Grandma to Work

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON — Mothers and grandmothers are now being wooed by British industry.

Many companies, concerned by the casual attitude of mini and maxi-skirted office workers, are finding that 50, 60 and 70-year-old typists and secretaries can knock efficiency spots off the younger generation.

Leading employment agencies say 20 per cent of the women they direct to office employment are over 50 and 10 per cent are over 60.

"We are looking for mature women who are not distracted by emotional problems outside," said a spokesman for the London branch of Western Girl International, which directs about 500,000 office workers to jobs in many countries.

"Too many young women do not take their work as seriously as they should. They are pre-occupied with boy friends, their make-up and the fellow in the office next door.

"This sort of thing makes for inefficiency. But a woman with a grown-up family is not distracted by such matters and is able to concentrate on her work better."

Within its own organization, Western Girl International employs a top secretary who is 73 and until recently had a legal secretary who carried on until she was 81.

"We rather like the woman who is starting a second career after bringing up a family," the Western spokesman said. "Such a person is likely to become absorbed in a new job and in many cases is a real asset to a firm."

A leading London insurance company makes a point of asking for older women when vacancies occur.

"We have at least three grandmothers on our staff," the manager said, "and they really pull their weight. Generally speaking, we find older women have a way of becoming part of the firm."

On the other hand, some London banks and insurance houses are offering marriage bonuses to girls graduating from business college at the end of five years' steady employment. This means that the girl who joins the company at 19 can marry at 23 and collect a bonus. And if, after a year or two of marriage, she wishes to return to work she has a good chance of being re-hired.

There is an unprecedented demand for secretaries in Britain today. This is due, not only to the huge increase in "paper work" created by bureaucratic government, but to the fact so many junior executives want secretaries as a status symbol.

Another reason given by employment agencies is that girls generally are not so keen on office jobs as they used to be and the electronic age has opened up many new avenues of employment.

Midnight's Ramble Has Happy Ending

The Great Pumpkin was good to 12-year-old Bonnie Fairbairn this year. He found her missing cat, Midnight.

Midnight went AWOL on October 17—much to the distress of Bonnie and her other cat, Boots.

He turned up at the SPCA on October 28, just in time to be chosen as one of three black cats to pose for the Times Women's department Halloween photo.

Midnight was sprung Monday for $2.50—50 cents for each day of room and board. He and Boots celebrated their reunion with a joyful romp—but not before Midnight had a bath.

"When we first brought him home," reported Margaret, "Boots got him down on the floor, put both paws on his chest and licked him from head to toe."

Stranger still was the sequel. The Fairbairns went to visit friends and discovered they too had retrieved a missing pet from the SPCA.

Their cat was the one sitting on top of the pumpkin.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Loving to Death

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In your answer to UNCERTAIN regarding euthanasia (mercy killing) for her elderly, bedridden mother, I think you have given the perfect answer as to why so many of us Catholics and non-Catholics alike oppose the liberalization or repeal of our anti-abortion statutes.

You said, "Giving a person the 'legal right' to terminate the life of another under some circumstances may be 'humane,' but because that right could be abused for selfish gain, society must be protected against it."

Truer words were never spoken. Thank you so much. —Physican in Tucson.

DEAR PHYSICIAN: I am not deserving of your thanks since I hold the view than no woman should be forced by law to bear a child she does not want. Preventing an unwanted child from being born is not, in my opinion, the same as killing a living person.

DEAR ABBY: Here is my answer to the lady who wants to put her helpless, bedridden mother to sleep, "mercifully."

A story is told about a grandfather, a father and son. The son was 12. The father grew tired caring for his elderly, ailing father who had become completely helpless. One day on the road to the river, the son met his father carrying the sick old grandfather in a large basket — the kind used to haul pigs to market.

"You see," the father explained to his son, "Grandfather is completely helpless, so I am going to lower him into the river in this basket."

The son was dumbfounded, but thinking quickly, se said, "But you are going to save the basket, aren't you? Someday I will need it for you."—F.D.G.

DEAR ABBY: I agree with your implication that the woman who wanted to put her elderly, bedridden mother out of her misery could be suspected of thinking mostly of herself. However, I wish you'd have gone further into your reply.

Today, it is illegal to terminate human life for humane reasons, and if legalized, it could be abused. But it could be legalized with careful safeguards, such as having the decision made by not only doctors and the family, but lawyers, clergymen and the patient himself. If all agree that the patient's life from then on would be painful and less and less worth living, and if the patient wants to die, he ought to be granted this boon.

We consider it cruel not to put an incurable, suffering animal out of his misery. Why should we not do as much for humans? For years The Society for Euthanasia has been trying to legalize "mercy killing." And I have every confidence that one day they will succeed.—All for Them in Berkeley.

DEAR ABBY: My heart went out to that mother who is lying sick and helpless in her old age, with a daughter who thinks it would be better to put her mother out of her misery.

I would like to say to that daughter, "Daughter, love your mother and keep her warm and clean, and hold her close to your heart in her last days just as she did to you in your first days.—Mary in Louisville.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest, Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

SEW SIMPLE By EUNICE FARMER

Pant Suit Seems Puckered

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I am enclosing a picture taken from a magazine showing a movie star wearing a satin pant suit. Obviously, it was expensive, but the seams had such a puckered look that perhaps only a home sewer would notice. I am wondering why we are knocking ourselves out trying to avoid this look when ready-made garments can't avoid it. I think it looks ugly and careless. Please give me your opinion. —Mrs. F.C.D.

Dear Mrs. F.C.D.:

I must agree after seeing the picture that the pant suit doesn't look beautifully pressed the way we try to finish a garment. Some of the very newest fabrics (and the most expensive) are made completely of nylon, Trevira, or other synthetic yarns. These yarns permit a garment to be washed. The garment won't water spot or wrinkle and is great for travelling.

On the other side of the picture is the liability. In this case, most of these fabrics will not press as smoothly and often have a puckered look. Our eye is quick to discover this when we are meticulous with our own sewing.

This can be corrected to a degree by using the proper thread, tension and stitch setting on the machine and the proper heat when pressing. Always test a small sample of synthetic fabric and adjust the heat of the iron accordingly. Some of these synthetic fabrics can take a much warmer iron than when they first appeared on the market. If you object to the appearance of synthetics too much, go back to our true fibre fabrics that always have a beautiful finish.

British stunt girl Roberta Gibbs fell from this horse to help sell cigarettes.

'Basically, I'm Nervous'—Stunt Girl

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — It's best not to tangle with Roberta Gibbs, as a man discovered who tried to tamper with her car and got knocked out for his pains.

Roberta is a girl who lives dangerously for a living. She is one of the small, intrepid band of movie stunt girls who have emerged in the last five years performing hazardous feats in front of the camera that once were considered suitable only for men.

At 26, Dorset-born Roberta, who plans to "look around" the Canadian televison scene during a visit to Toronto this winter, has five years of stunting behind her. An attractive brunette with large brown eyes, she looks more like a fashion model or the beautician she one was than daredevil whose daily round consists of fights and falls.

As a child, she led an energetically outdoor life on a caravan site by the sea at Bridport, learning to swim and ride horseback before many children learn to walk.

She became interested in the possibilities of stunting when she worked as an extra on location scenes of Tom Jones and the director discovered her skill with horses. But in the meantime she worked in an atomic research establishment and for a cosmetic firm before deciding to take the plunge into the high-risk world of thrills and spills, first taking a course in judo "to learn how to fall."

Her first job was a relatively simple leap over a hedge in full evening dress, doubling for Lucille Ball in a TV film. Later assignments became more complicated and hazardous.

Recently she was scrambling across the rooftops of Oxford Street in a frantic midnight chase, doubling for Gayle Hunnicutt in Freelance. Her costume, a billowing, filmy nightgown, added to the problems of keeping her footing on the cold, slippery tiles.

"Sometimes the clothes you have to wear are more of a hazard than anything," she said in an interview.

She thinks her most dangerous assignment was a fight with a Spanish girl on a sloping rock face eight feet square with a 70-foot drop on all sides. The other girl spoke no English and something went wrong with one of the throws. Roberta ended up on her stomach, badly grazed, at the very edge of the precipice.

"Usually you don't have time to be scared — you're too busy working out what you're goint to do."

"Basically I'm a very nervous person — I see danger where most people wouldn't, and eliminate it."

After a particularly tense scene, she sometimes finds reaction settting in two or three days later. "It usual,y hits me in the stomach and I'm sick. But not at the time.

"I only ever really feel a complete person when I'm using my mind and my body, when I have to get out of a tight spot."

She has naturally quick reactions and keeps fit by swimming and daily exercises, with an occasional run around Battersea Park.

"It's a question of keeping yourself up to a certain level all the time rather than training for a particlar job. The phone could go now and I'd have a 40-foot fall to do tomorrow."

Stunt artists have their own trade technique for long falls, landing usually on a mattress laid across a pile of foam rubber to absorb it They never use a spring mattress, which might break bones on the rebound.

The body is manipulated in mid-flight depending on the kind of fall. If it's a fee-first drop, the legs are tucked in just before impact, the body rolls over and the shoulders take the brunt.

About half Roberta's work is doubling for stars, but she also has a flourising line in TV commercials. Among her feature films are The Assassination Bureau, in which she doubled for Diana Rigg; the motor-racing movie Grand Prix and The Magnificent Two.

It's a highly paid business — though personal insurance bills eat into the profits — and stunt artists are muc in demand. There are eight or nine stunt girls working in Britain, who got their breakthrough when fashions like miniskirts and see-through dresses made it impossible for film-makers to use men dressed as women in stunt scenes.

Most of the stunt girls are married — Roberta's marriage broke up some years ago — and most specialize in a particulr line. Roberta is noted for her talent with horses but prefers to keep her range general.

The women need courage not only for their physical occupational hazards but also to combat some of the most virulent male prejudice in show business.

Government Inspectors Check on Meat Quality

One of the major grocery expenditures for every household is for meat. It pays to know what grade and quality one is buying.

Fresh meat is health-inspected by government inspectors prior to retail sale in supermarkets to ensure its wholesomeness.

Meats used in making wieners, sausages and other prepared or processed meats are also subject to rigid inspection. Major packers and processors not only comply with minimum standards, but often exceed government specifications.

Government legislation defines grades for beef and poultry sold in most retail outlets. Veal and lamb are sold by grade in some cities. While pork is graded before marketing, it is not sold by grade.

Best-known grades for beef are Canada Choice and Canada Good. Canada Choice is top of the range, the meat the consumer takes home when she buys red brand. The standard demands beef from young steers and heifers, with a high proportion of meat to bone. The meat should have a good covering of fat and tracings of fat marbled through the lean.

Canada Good quality is blue brand beef and offers a slightly lower proportion of meat to bone and somewhat less marbling than in Canada Choice.

Next is Canada Standard, or beef with a brown grade stamp. This classification has a lower proportion of fat to lean than Canada Good.

Other grades are identified as Canada Commercial and Canada Utility but these are less likely to be found in retail markets.

Economy cuts offer good value when prepared in an appetizing way and cooked with moist (not dry) heat. The nutritional value is equal to that in more expensive beef.

When shopping for poultry, look for grade marks printed on metal tags, transparent bags or label insert. Grade is designated by color.

Canada Grade Special carries a purple marking, indicating a near-perfect specimen and finest quality.

Most commonly available in retail outlets is poultry that displays the Canada Grade A tag with red markings. This identification tells the consumer that the bird is normally formed, well-fleshed and fattened. Chickens will have fat showing over breast and thighs.

Canada Grade B (with a blue tag) is used for birds that are normally formed but not as well-fleshed and fattened as in Grade A. Utility Grade is similar but one or more parts of the bird may be missing.

Dairy products, too, are graded. Butter is sold as Canada First Grade and Canada Second Grade. No fat other than butterfat can be used in the making. First Grade is highest quality with smooth texture, excellent flavor and uniform color. Second Grade is slightly lower in quality, generally used for cooking rather than as a table spread.

All provinces require that eggs retail by grade. Marks must show on cartons and bulk displays; all eggs are required to be free from discolored yolks and blood spots.

Grade A-1 designates normal shape, sound shells and finest quality interiors. Yolks will be round and compact, surrounded by dense albumen. Cold storage eggs cannot be sold under this marking.

The most common variety in retail stores is Grade A, eggs that are practically normal in shape with sound shells and well-rounded yolks. Grade B eggs may be slightly abnormal in shape with yolks slightly flattened or enlarged, and less firm albumen.

Eggs classified as A-1 and A are available in sizes: extra large, weighing 2¼ ounces; large, weighing 2 ounces; medium, weighing 1¾ ounces, and small, weighing 1½ ounces.

Pee wee eggs weigh in at less than 1½ ounces.

Canada's Department of Agriculture says it is to the consumer's interests to know grades and to buy by grade.

Because grading is intended to protect Canadian shoppers, any consumer who feels that a particular product fails to meet standards can submit a complaint to an agriculture inspector for action.

Metal, Chemical Monitoring Launched

OTTAWA (CP) — North Americans may be consuming lead and cadmium in their diets at levels equal to or above those acceptable by health authorities, reliable sources said Tuesday.

As a result of this and also of indications of mercury contamination, the federal food and drug directorate has launched a special monitoring program.

Dr. R. A. Chapman, director-general of the directorate, said in an interview monitoring will cover all the heavy metals—lead, cadmium, arsenic, selenium, zinc, tin and nickel—plus pesticides, chemical compounds like aflatoxin which is produced by a soil mold, and polychlorinated biphenyls, known as PCBs.

PCBs are stable chemicals long used in paints, resins and plasters and as heat-exchange fluids.

Among the metals, lead, cadmium and mercury pose the greatest potential threat to health.

Federal authorities estimate the probable intake of lead through foods in North America is just about at the limit of acceptability—350 micrograms per person per day—established by the World Health Organization. They consider that most of the lead found in foods may come from fallout from leaded gasolines.

Scientists estimate the daily intake of cadmium may be greater than the acceptable 175 micrograms per person. Research on cadmium toxicology is a priority item for federal scientists.

Mercury in the food supply has been under investigation for some time. Action has included bans on commercial fishing in some areas and warnings to sport fishermen not to eat their catch.

The other metals—arsenic, selenium, zinc, tin and nickel—appear to pose no immediate threat.

Sabres Pin Winger

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League announced Monday that Buffalo Sabres had claimed right-winger Steve Atkinson, 22. He was obtained by the Blues from Boston Bruins last June in the NHL's inter-league draft.

LAW CATCHES ROBIN HOOD

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — The law caught up with Robin Hood Tuesday—and fined him £25 ($62.50).

The 20th-century namesake of England's legendary outlaw was told by the magistrate: "Cut out the fighting and don't forget the chivalry."

Hood, a 23-year-old seaman, said he was the victim of a couple of coincidences that added up to an eternal triangle.

He met his former girl-friend by chance on a bus. By chance they were spotted by her current boy-friend, who gave chase by bicycle.

The bus stopped. Hood jumped off and a fight started.

Hood pleaded guilty to causing bodily harm to 20-year-old Keith Smith but said he was provoked.

Magistrate Ethel Mack told him: "Forget about history. The days of bold knights are over."

PART OF ST. JOSEPH'S DILEMMA

Panel to Rule on Sterilization Bids

By DON VIPOND

A medical-moral committee at St. Joseph's Hospital to rule on individual applications for sterilization should be at work before the year is out.

But the committee might be out of business before it starts if the operation of the hospital passes from the hands of the Sisters of St. Ann to a new public society and that society's board doesn't favor it.

St. Joseph's Hospital has been balancing in a state of change for over a year and the medical-moral committee's positon now being formed is just one example of the uncertainty hovering everywhere.

The Sisters of St. Ann founded the hospital 93 years ago. For over a year they have been struggling to turn the operation into a public hospital while ensuring its future development and this has led to a series of technical and time-consuming delays.

Paralleling these delays has been a growing pressure from patients and doctors to have voluntary sterilization operations and even therapeutic abortions performed at the hospital. Almost all the money which keeps St. Joseph's running now comes from the public purse.

TOTAL UP

The number of these operations done at Victoria's other major hospital, Royal Jubilee, has been soaring in recent months.

But at the moment the Sisters are still the legal owners of St. Joseph's Hospital and as such, control its policies. The Roman Catholic Church is unalterably opposed to therapeutic abortions but has taken a modified view of sterilizations in a new Medico-Moral Guide, issued last April.

The new church guidelines propose appointment of medico-moral committees and Bishop Remi de Roo has moved to establish such a committee at St. Joseph's.

It will include three doctors from the hospital's staff, a member of the hospital administration and two clergymen, one Catholic and one Anglican.

The committee would rule on applications from doctors on behalf of patients who want vasectomies, the male sterilization operation, or tubal ligations, the sterilization operation for females.

What criteria will the committee use?

EACH CASE UNIQUE

Each application will be considered as a unique case, says Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, the hospital's executive director.

But the new medico-moral guide for Catholic hospitals makes these points, among others:

● From the moment of conception life must be guarded with the greatest care. All deliperate medical action, the purpose of which is to deprive a foetus or an embryo of its life, is immoral.

● However, medical means required to cure a grave illness in a pregnant woman, and which cannot be deferred until the foetus is viable, are allowed even though it might endanger the pregnancy in progress.

● Sterilization, whether permanent or temporary, for a man or for a woman, may not be used as a means of birth control.

When St. Joseph's becomes a hospital under the jurisdiction of a public society, it will have severed the restraints the Catholic Church now imposes.

The society's board may take the much more liberal view of abortions and sterilizations found in other public hospitals and this in turn could produce a crisis of conscience for some of the hospital's staff.

The code puts it this way:

"No person is obligied to take part in a medical activity which he judges in conscience to be immoral."

SMOKESCREEN LAW REMAINS

NILES, Mich. (UPI) — A law dating back to the roaring 20s aimed at keeping bootleggers from throwing up smoke screens while being chased by cops, was used by police.

Officers said Jonathan Larsen, 19, of Gobles, Mich., was stopped for a traffic violation and police found a smoke producing device attached to his car.

Before Larsen was charged, police had to look up the law to see if it was still in effect. It is, and it is a felony.

Price for a Job—Clean, Sack Ton-and-a-Half of Potatoes

By ELIZABETH FORBES

In my last column I left Victoria's ex-mayor Percy E. George (at the age of 15) on a railway station platform in Quebec in April, 1905, waving goodbye to his mother, stepfather and sister, as they set out for Winnipeg after the family had crossed from England as immigrants with a group brought out by the Salvation Army.

Forbes

His mother had told him shortly before that he was to stay in the east near his older brother William who was on an Ontario farm. She gave him a shilling and bade him go to the Salvation Army office where work would also be found for him on a farm.

★ ★ ★

The train puffed its way out of the station and he was alone.

"I must have looked a strange sight," he told me the other day when we sat in the sunny living room of his home on Mars Street.

"I was wearing knickers, a short jacket with an Eton collar and one of those round skull caps popular with English school boys. And I was very forlorn."

The French Canadian people "were not friendly." They refused to speak English, wouldn't give directions and crowded the young lad off the buses. Finally, however, by determined effort, he reached the Salvation Army office.

There he was told an Ontario farmer named Langdon, at the village of Welcome near Port Hope, was looking for a lad.

They put him on a train going west at midnight. It reached Port Hope at six in the morning and he had to find his way from there to the Langdon farm.

"It took me two hours to walk to Welcome," he reminisces today. "Farmer Langdon came to the kitchen door. I told him why I was there. He looked down at me and said he was sorry the job had been filled three weeks before."

★ ★ ★

It was a sad blow. The young lad was weary, hungry and more than a little lonely. "It must have shown in my face for the next thing Langdon asked was whether I had eaten breakfast.

"When I shook my head he ushered me into the big kitchen and introduced me to his wife and five daughters who were just taking off for school."

Then he took the young Percy into a shed, showed him "about a ton and a half of potatoes all sprouting white tubers" and told him if he would spend the day removing the tubers and sacking the spuds he'd get breakfast, dinner and supper and at the end of the day he (Langdon) would take him along to the next concession where he knew there was a place open for a teenage boy.

Percy George cleaned and sacked those potatoes and Langdon kept his word. After the chores were done that night he hitched up the wagon and took the lad to a 640-acre farm bordering on Lake Ontario, run by a brother and sister named Marsh.

★ ★ ★

"He was a devil and she was an angel," is the way the lad, now in his 81st year, remembers that twosome.

There was field work to do, nine cows to milk, 500 chickens to feed, pigs to care for and seven horses to groom, including a prize stallion and a mare that Marsh entered in trotting races. "I was to stay a year and at the end of that time I'd get fifty dollars."

The offer was accepted and the 15-year-old boy with his Cockney accent, immediately became the butt of supposed jokes thought up by Marsh and his hired man "until Miss Marsh came to the rescue, and gave them a good tongue-lashing. After that the tormenting pretty well stopped."

Near the end of the year the brother William wrote from Oshawa that he was going out to Vancouver and he wanted Percy to go with him. Train fare from Toronto was forty-nine dollars.

By then the year's pay had dwindled to forty-seven dollars, Marsh having spent the other three to buy the boy a warm cap with ear muffs and heavy boots for the winter.

"Miss Marsh quietly made up the difference and sent me off with a hamper of home-cooked food that did us for the trip. We travelled in a colonist car and slept on the wooden seats."

In Vancouver they were met by their mother, sister and stepfather who had moved west from Winnipeg.

The stepfather wanted Percy to join him in the bricklaying trade. "Being an independent 16 years by then I refused and went looking for work on my own . . . but that's another story."

I'll tell you that story and bring Percy George to Victoria in my column Friday.

Most Believe Women Are Not Second-Class

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

(World Copyright Reserved)

Despite feminist claims that women are treated as second-class citizens, the big majority of Canadains (65 per cent) reject the idea. At present, only 20 per cent think they are, while another 10 per cent say they sometimes are.

Men and women, perhaps surprisingly for many, think very much alike on this claim, with women a little less inclined than men to say they are, not considered inferior beings, but by a small ratio.

In the executive and professional segments, where women are winning some degree of success, repudiation of the idea is at its highest (73 per cent). This compares with 63 per cent in the labor force.

The question:

"AS YOU MAY KNOW, SOME WOMEN ARE ORGANIZING A FEMINIST MOVEMENT. ONE OF THEIR CLAIMS IS THAT WOMEN ARE TREATED AS SECOND-CLASS CITIZENS. DO YOU AGREE WITH THIS, OR NOT?"

The table below shows the average Canadian reaction, compared to those of men versus women, as well as the various regions, and occupations.

	Agree	Disagree	Sometimes Are	Undecided
CANADA	20%	65%	10%	5%
Men	19	69	7	5
Women	21	61	12	6
Maritimes	23	64	13
Quebec	21	61	6	12
Ontario	21	67	10	2

Executive; professional	17	73	8	2
Sales; clerical	16	69	11	4
Labor	21	63	10	6
Farm and other	23	59	9	9

A recent study in the U.S. shows that most American women think they get as good a break in life as men. When the question was put to them by the Gallup Poll, 65 per cent of the women said "yes," while 35 per cent said they did not.

Mine Strike Debated

CASSIAR, B.C. (CP) — Key personnel from Cassiar Asbestos Corp. Ltd., head offices in Toronto have arrived in this northern British Columbia community to try to avert a strike by 370 mine workers dissatisfied with new contract negotiations.

The members of the United Steelworkers of America voted last week in favor of strike action and gave 72 hours strike notice on Monday.

While union demands were not revealed, the last company offer was an eight-per-cent annual pay increase in a 26-month contract.

A strike at Cassiar would shut down part of the company's transport operation at Whitehorse.

However, both sides indicated they are still hopeful an agreement can be reached

Thieves Whipped

BONINAL, Brazil (Reuters) — Two thieves caught red-handed stealing life-sized statues from a church here were whipped around the town square by an angry crowd and forced to carry their loot on their shoulders. The whipping was apparently meant as a warning to other thieves of church relics, who have made rich hauls recently around this northeastern town.

Raquel Acquires New Dimensions

By HILMI TOROS

ROME (AP)—Raquel Welch is acquiring new dimensions.

Dimensions, that is, of a serious character actress in movies and, in life, an impassioned and opinionated sidewalk cafe debater — whenever she circumvents the persistent paparazzi free-lance photographers.

In her latest film, The Beloved, she portrays a suppressed Greek housewife, working at a loom in peasant dress, going to the village well with an earthenware jug or cavorting in a folk dance.

That's some reversal for one who rode to fame with a curvy body and wound up, in Myra Breckenridge, playing a character of high sexual sophistication.

When not acting, Raquel likes to go out incognito and hold lengthy conversations about everything from drugs to sex, women's liberation movements to motherhood.

NOW 'AN ACTRESS'

"I'm an actress," she said in a recent interview. "So far, I've just had a glamorous image and that was it.

"My image as a physical person was stronger than my work.

"But it's changing now."

The change will be seen in the Beloved, shot on just $500,000 in scenic Cyprus. It's about a modern-day Greek love triangle spelling death for all. In her first test of serious acting skill, Raquel is directed by a promising but untested 29 - year - old Greek named George Pan Cosmatos.

In the film, Raquel spurns bikinis in favor of a peasant dance beneath a broiling sun. He speech as the peasant character is in heavily Greek-accented English.

She considers such low-budget movies a good trend in Cinema, citing Zorba The Greek and Z.

"When you don't spend too much money, the decision rests with the creative people — not with businessmen who deal in millions," she says.

When filming is finished, she comes to Rome, where she is still an eye-catching beauty.

She is also Raquel, articulate woman.

One of her main concerns lately is drug abuse.

LEGALIZE POT

"Marijuana should be legalized," she argues as one who says she has tried it but does not use it. "It's basically harmless, as harmless as liquor.

"It need not lead to other hard drugs, which should be banned.

"Hard drugs, like LSD, are dangerous," she added, referring to the experiences of some unnamed friends. "It's like jumping from a high building and enjoying the ride down."

Raquel is firmly against demonstrations by women. "It's not necessary to have a movement with fanfare. Let women do these things privately. Anyway, women's liberation is a trend and like all trends it's on its way out.

"I already feel obsolete, looking at my children ages seven and nine grow up."

Two Youths Must Assess Their Town

PENTICTON, (CP) — Two youths whose disturbance-causing Halloween pranks ran afoul of the law, found out Tuesday that the courts can have a trick or two too.

They were ordered to write essays. If they do a good job, they may get suspended sentences.

Provincial Judge Ross Collver ordered John Douglas Scott, 18, to prepare an essay on the problems of policing the city of Penticton, by interviewing police.

Randy Jack Fisher, also 18, must write an essay entitled: "Halloween and other things: alternatives we should consider."

Judge Collver said the essays were assigned to give the youths an opportunity to say how they feel the city of Penticton has let them down. If good, the essays will be released for publication.

A third youth was ordered to donate 20 hours of his time to a charitable organization and a fourth fined $100 or 14 days in jail.

The two essay writers were remanded to Dec. 18.

Bill Backing MPs' Bills Talked Out

OTTAWA (CP) — A private member's motion that sought a better end for private member's bills than being talked out was itself talked out in the Commons.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin (Peace River) introduced a motion that would have allowed the Commons procedure committee to see whether some bills from private members could be brought to a vote.

But his motion shared the fate of most private member's measures and was debated — or talked out — by other members so that the hour set aside for such matters ended without a recorded vote. That in effect killed the motion.

MAN'S BEST . . . WHAT?

HAVANT, England (UPI) — Policeman Fred Jones helped an injured dog he found next to a railway line. The animal repaid him by biting him, opening a wound which required 16 stitches.

Shirley Described As Kook, Oddball; Now She's an Author

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As is its custom, Hollywood was quick to categorize Shirley MacLaine when she came to films. She was a kook, a pixy, an oddball with a marriage that made no sense to anyone but her and Steve Parker.

Miss MacLaine now has written an autobiography, Don't Fall Off the Mountain—her husband's suggestion when she left for the Himalayas. The book will probably not change the Hollywood assessment of her. But less prejudiced readers will find her a warm, compassionate, perceptive woman.

Also a good writer, if we can believe her publisher's claim that nobody ghosted the 270 pages for her.

Don't Fall Off the Mountain is actually two books of equal length. The first details her childhood, her rise to stardom and the hell that ensued.

The second half concerns her travels: "My life expanded and opened up on all levels when I began to travel," she writes. "I've always felt that I would never develop into a really fine actress because I cared more about life beyond the camera than the life in front of it."

Her wanderings took her into black life in the Deep South, to a Paris brothel to research Irma La Douce, to village existence among the Masai in Africa, and to Bhutan on the roof of the world.

HEAVIES IN BOOK

The author's tone is generally kind, but there are some heavies in her book. One is the late columnist Mike Connolly, whom she slapped—her lawyer had warned her that a closed fist would be assault.

Other victims of Miss MacLaine's pen are her father and producer Hal Wallis.

Her father, Ira O. Beaty, is pictured as an uptight southerner who did everything possible to humiliate her ambitions to become a performer. In later years he declined to allow Shirley to bring Sidney Poitier to dinner—"It's not that I wouldn't be delighted; it's the neighbors . . . I have to live here when dinner is over. You don't."

Producer Wallis brought the actress to Hollywood after seeing her on Broadway in The Pyjama Game—she was the understudy for Carol Haney, who had broken a leg. She complains about her servitude to Wallis—nine pictures at an average of $15,800 each. Shortly after she bought her freedom from him, she was making $800,000 a film.

Her younger brother is actor Warren Beatty—he spells his last name with a double t while their father uses only one.

Little Interest in Low-Lead Gas

TORONTO (CP) — Retail service station operators say little interest is being shown in no-lead and low-lead gasolines, apparently because 1971-model cars are the first specifically designed to take the new lower-octane products.

"We've had our new pump in for a week, and I estimate we've sold about $15 worth of the new gas," a Shell Canada Ltd. dealer in North Toronto said.

Shell began installing equipment for its no lead Shell Ultra in October.

A retailer who handles Esso 2000, Imperial Oil Ltd.'s low-lead brand, said he is pumping 75 to 80 gallons a day. The average for regular and premium gasolines at his outlet is between 3,500 and 4,000 gallons a day of each.

"We started pumping about three weeks ago, and it's very low," he said. "Quite a few people are asking for it, but they can't use it. And there are very few 1971 models around."

The manager at a Sun Oil Co. Ltd. outlet said he began pumping Sunoco's new Sunocolite low-lead brand Oct. 15 and "there's very little demand."

"I don't think we've had one new car in yet."

SOME ADAPT

Shell has circulated a pamphlet explaining which cars are able to use its no lead gasoline and which models can be adapted for it.

Oil companies say the cost of converting their refineries and equipment to produce and dispense entirely lead-free gasolines would be considerable.

An Imperial Oil Ltd. spokesman confirmed the cost of refinery changes to his company across Canada would be between $150 million and $200 million. One estimate if the whole industry has to convert is $900 million.

But manufacturers of gasoline pumps report they are busier this year than they have been for some time, and they say the new gasolines are the reason.

A TRAVELLING MAN

MONTREAL (UPI) — Dick Rock, 41, has been named to succeed Gene Kirby as travelling secretary for the National Baseball League's Montreal Expos.

STRONGER CAR WANTED, SHOWS INSURANCE PROBE

TORONTO (CP) — Most Canadians would willingly sacrifice appearance for a stronger car that was easier to repair, even if it cost more initially, a survey conducted in nine provinces by the Insurance Bureau of Canada shows.

The survey, conducted for general insurance companies, was designed to evaluate public opinion toward auto insurance. Interviews were not conducted in Saskatchewan, which has a compulsory government-run auto insurance plan.

The survey found that 84 per cent of the more than 4,000 interviewed favored laws requiring production of more sturdy autos.

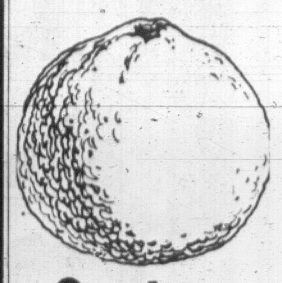

Stricter enforcement of traffic laws, periodic driving tests and removal of licences from drivers with bad driving records found most acceptance as methods for reducing premium rates.

About 11 per cent of those interviewed felt that governments could administer auto insurance more cheaply, while slightly more than half favored permitting governments to dictate the kinds of auto insurance that insurance companies could sell and the public could buy.

Prince Careful Not to Excite U.S. Into Action

By NORMAN WEBSTER
Special to The Times

PEKING — Cambodia's deposed head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk says his forces are moving carefully in their drive to unseat the rightist Lon Nol regime, to avoid txciting public opion in the United States.

At a press conference here he said his forces would not try to capture the Cambodian capital, Phnom Penh, at the moment. He feared this could so excite public opinion in the United States as to allow U.S. President Richard Nixon to step up U.S. efforts on behalf of the Lon Nol government.

"I don't want to let Nixon have a pretext to increase, you know, his war plan, to develop his war plan against us," the prince said.

"Nixon would have a pretext to postpone, to delay, the withdrawal of his troops and the withdrawal of his planes."

"If we attacked Phnom Penh, Nixon would even have a pretext to invade Cambodia for the second time. So we have to be careful, not be in a hurry."

The best course was oe of ever increasing gains in the countryside, the prince said.

"Phnom Penh will fall last, I think, after the other parts of Cambodia. We want to liberate all the other parts of Cambodia first, and after that Phnom Penh will fall, will fall by itself."

SIHANOUK
. . . 'countryside first'

The prince was speaking at a large press conference here in the great hall of the people. As Chinese movie cameras whirrred, he delivered a long report on the situation in his country. The main exhibit was a map of Cambodia showing the "liberation situation" as of September. All at the conference were given a copy.

On the map the entire northeast and large sections of the rest of the country were colored a pretty pink — to designate "zones completely liberated." The pink and white stripes of "partially liberated zones" covered much of the rest.

There was little grey — "zones not yet liberated"—on the map. Phnom Penh and its immediately surrounding area was one such zone. The south shore of Lake Tonle Sap and an area to its west formed another, although new attacks were said to have been launched there.

Oddar Mean Chey province in the northwest, on the Thai border, was a third grey area on the map, but the prince said recent information indicated its situation had greatly changed. He asked those at the press conference to color that area liberated too. Red pencils were provided.

The prince announced with a flourish that the Parrot's Beak and Fishhook areas abutting South Vietnam, which were invaded by U.S. troops, in May, had been retaken by his forces. The liberation map showed the areas all pink save for a thin corridor of only partially liberated territory on either side of the main road to Saigon.

Sihanouk said his forces number 30,000, with another 8,000 men and women in a people's militia. He strongly denounced contentions that the troops fighting for him are not Khmers but rather North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

"Rule number one of the guerrilla is to depend on the people. Military successes can not be obtaned if we use foreign troops.

"Lon Nol uses foreign troops — from Saigon, from Bangkok and from the U.S. we use Cambodians, we use the Cambodian people and not the Vietnamese."

The prince based himself throughout his press conference on a wide selection of journalistic reports — mainly American, French and British. "So you can not say this is just propaganda. The news about the liberation of Cambodia often comes from our enemy."

Sihanouk also read extracts from a recent report sent by the three ministers in his government who are heading operations in Cambodia. There was news of elections, militia training and care for the people's livelihood in liberated areas.

The report also assured the prince that the search for missing journalists was continuing. Those found would be set free, it said, adding rather sharply: "Their stay with us has created a number of difficult problems. In fact, it is necessary not only to ensure their safety, but also to take constant care of their health and even try to satisfy their exacting demands for food (bread, meat, alcoholic drinks, etc., all those things which we ourselves are deprived of)."

Days Are Empty For Palestinians

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Salim Moussa's day passes in bitterness and boredom. Then he sleeps in a tent with only a straw mat between him and the ground.

Now that the nights in northern Jordan are getting colder he says he is not sleeping well.

"Soon it will start raining and all these dusty paths around here will turn to mud," Moussa said. "Winter is the worst time."

Moussa is 68 and was born in Haifa. When Israel was created in 1948 he fled to a Palestinian refugee camp on the west bank of the Jordan River. When the Israelis occupied that area in 1967 he fled to the east bank and lives now in the Irbid camp in northern Jordan.

A farmer most of his life, Moussa spends his days tending a small plot near his tent, visiting friends in other tents or tin-roofed shacks where they sip coffee and talk.

The subjects never change: Palestine, the Israelis, the commandos and, lately King Hussein and the army.

"My days are empty, without purpose, so the ordinary activities—washing, buying food or the trip to the coffee shop become a ritual, a proof that I'm still alive. I've never been there but I think this is what prison must be like."

There are 17,000 other refugees in Moussa's camp.

BITTER, BORED

Like him most are bitter, bored and despairing. They live in tents or in grey shacks lined up in rows, each with a United Nations identification number.

Moussa and his wife get 22 pounds of flour every month and smaller amounts of sugar, ice, cooking oil and a bar of soap from the UN Relief and Works Agency—UNRWA.

The agency says this ration provides 1,500 calories a day, about 1,000 below what some nutritionists consider adequate.

"Like many of the families here I have a son who works for an oil company in Kuwait. He sends us money that we use to buy extra food at local markets," Moussa said.

Medical care is provided by a UN clinic, but Moussa said it is "bureaucratic, stingy with medicine and often closed. You want to know why the fedayeen have so much support in the camps? Al Fatah runs a clinic that's just the opposite of the UN one."

Moussa's wife put away the cups and lifted a bucket to start for the water pipes a half-mile away.

QUARTERS CROWDED

Hundreds of children played in the dusty alleys outside. The children live sometimes six or seven in a room with parents in the shacks lined over three acres of a barren hill.

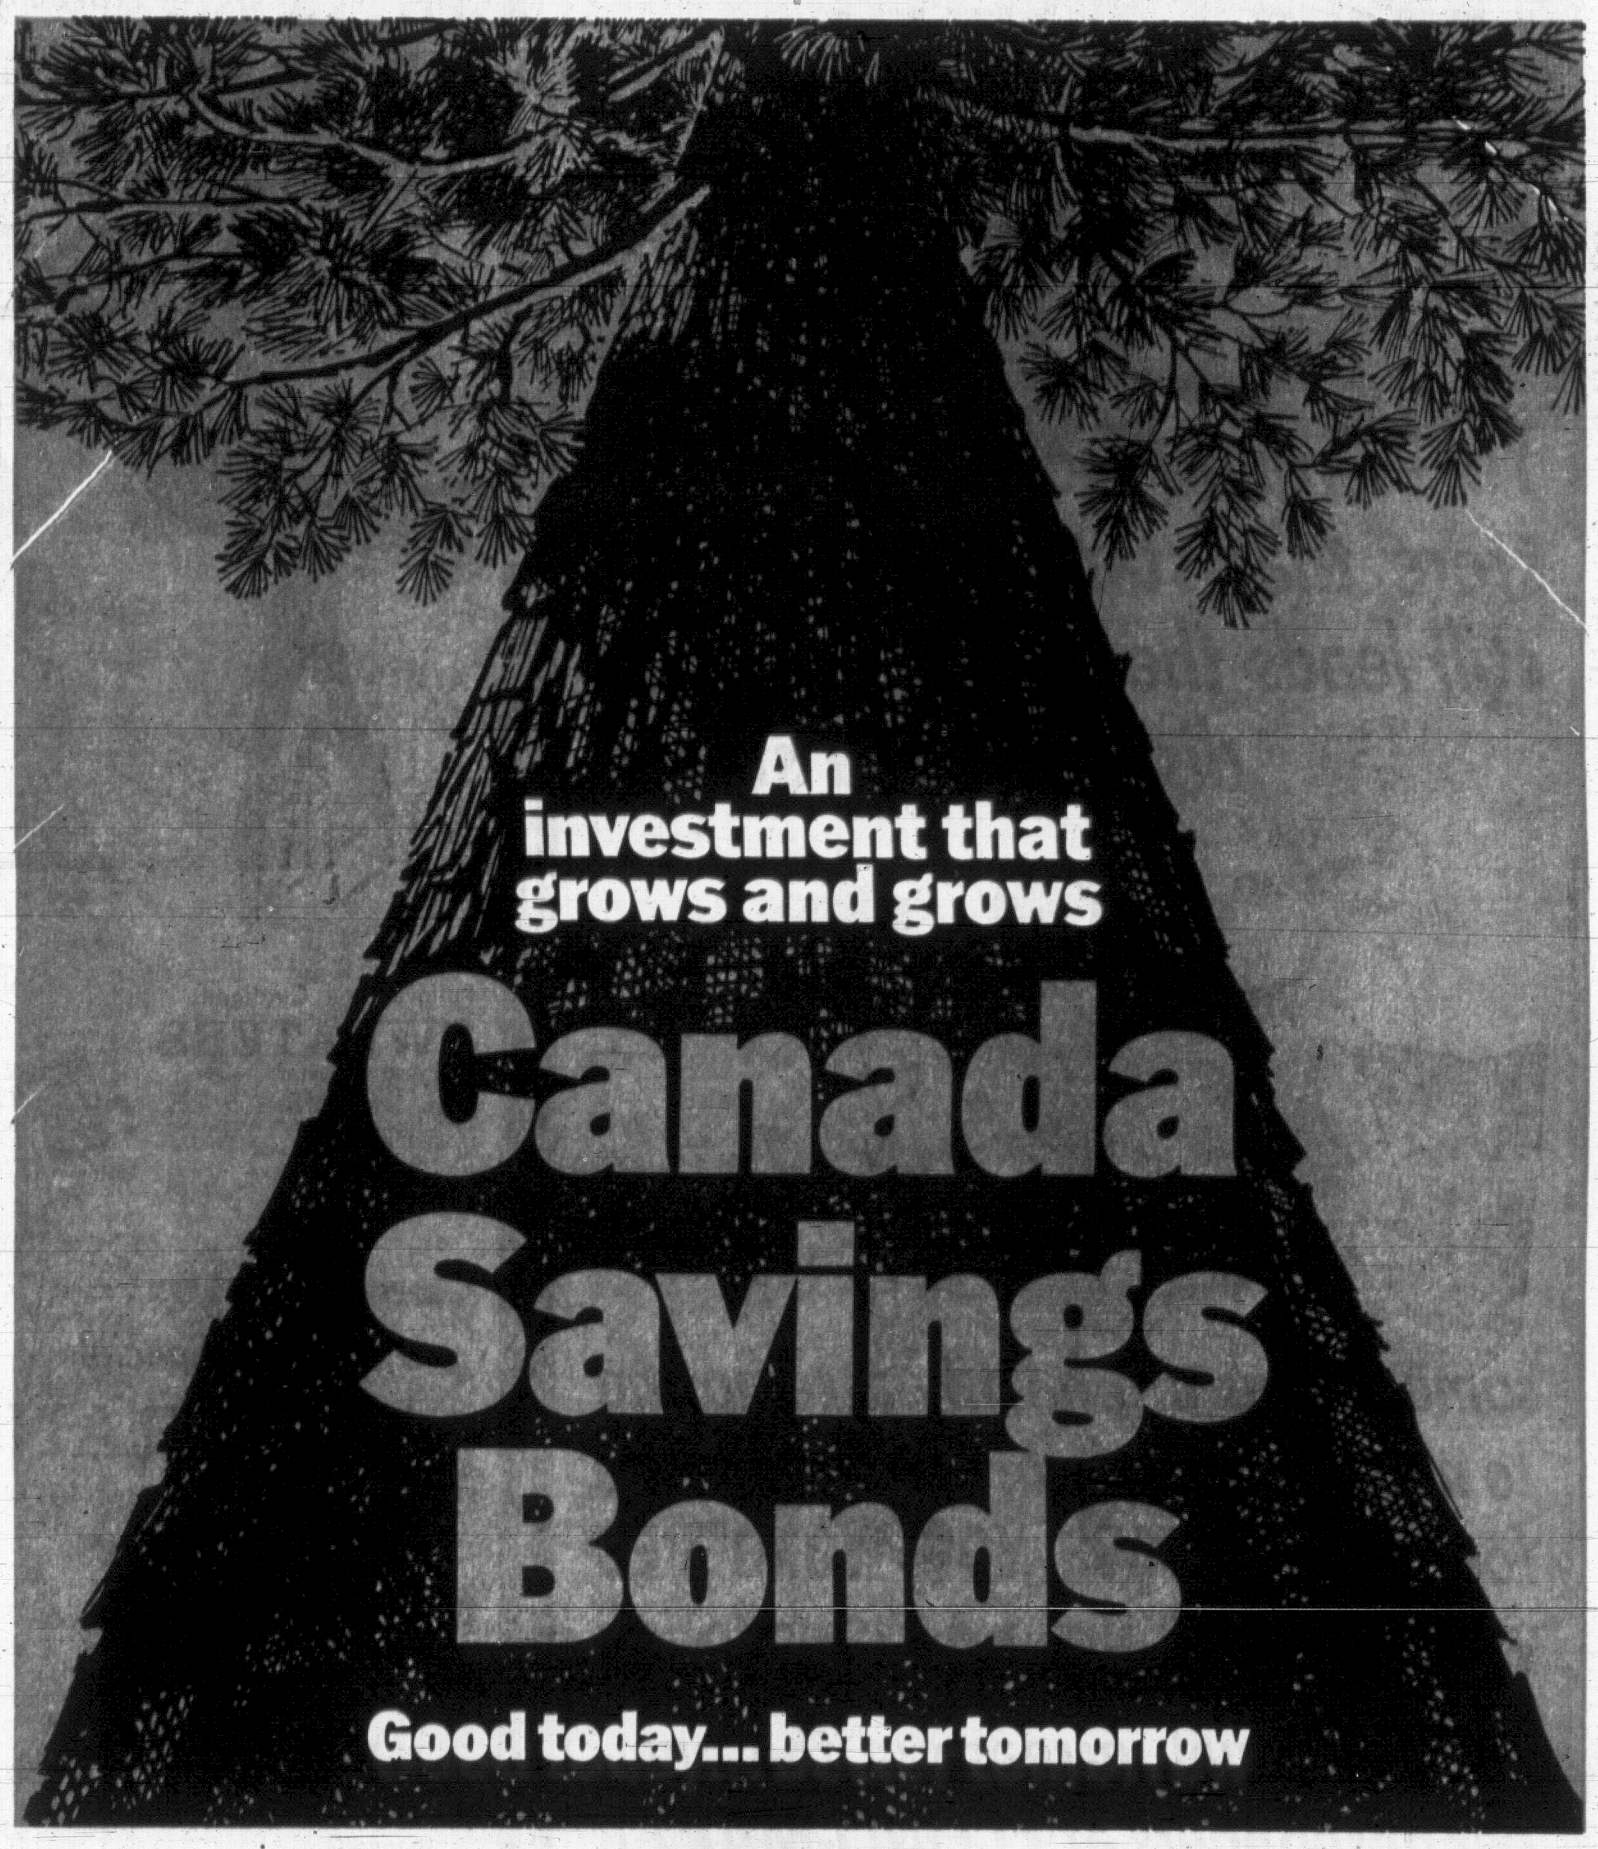

Moussa is resigned to dying in the camp "even though a day doesn't pass when I don't think what it would be like to return to Haifa. Everything's changed, I'm sure, but I would like to go back." Critics of the camps charge that a welfare mentality has developed—that Palestinians cling to the dole from the UN the same way some Western families depend on welfare cheques.

In Israel, officials complain that no other peoples in the world have remained "refugees" for such a long period.

Some Palestinians who fled in 1948 rose above their beginnings. The 40,000 Palestinian university graduates in the Arab world are the intellectual elite of the countries in which they live—professors, doctors, journalists and bankers. Others have established businesses.

The unknown quantity in the Palestinian equation is the million Palestinians living under Israeli occupation in the west bank and the Gaza Strip.

Premium Increase Defended

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey refused Tuesday to back down from a widely-questioned proposal to increase unemployment insurance premiums for employers with higher-than-average layoff rates.

"I think it's awfully important to keep this feature in the plan," Mackasey told the Commons labor committee as it wound up hearings on his white paper to revise unemployment insurance.

He asked the committee to endorse the proposal for experience or "merit-rating" in its report so that a special committee of industry and labor representatives can work out an acceptable formula.

The experience rating proposal, he said, will encourage such industries to "rationalize" their operations and create greater stability in the work force.

The employer's share of unemployment insurance costs under the existing plan is $1.40 for each $100 of insured income.

The new plan would increase by 1.16 million the number of workers covered and reduce the average employer's share to $1.11. Those with a below-average layoff pattern would pay only 79 cents but high layoff figures would result in premiums of $1.58. Full implementation would be delayed to 1976.

Bowl Delay Irks Minister

Resources Minister Ray Williston said Tuesday he is "very close" to setting another deadline for the developers of Cypress Bowl to find new financing acceptable to the provincial government.

Williston indicated his patience is wearing thin with Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources, promoter of the ski development on 600 acres of crown land in West Vancouver.

It is now almost a year since Alpine was told to sever its connections with Benguet Consolidated Inc., an international company with gambling interests in the Bahamas.

Williston said Alpine has written to say it has interests who meet the provincial requirements for financing the project.

"We have written back saying we want to re-examine the whole basis on which they are working," Williston said.

25,000 Entries

Bob Wright, Oak Bay marina Sealand president, is wading in whale contest applications.

Since Tuesday's deadline for naming Sealand's white killer whale, Wright reports that 6,000 entries have already been considered.

He adds "... and we have barely made a dent in them."

Because of the reponse final results will not be known until at least Nov. 11.

Wright estimates that between 25,000 and 40,000 entries were received.

A panel of three judges will whittle these down to about 100 for closer consideration and final choice.

The contest winner will be awarded 250,000 pennies.

Tito Visited

BELGRADE (Reuters) — President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania has arrived here for talks with President Tito of Yugoslavia.

Project Blocked

MATSQUI (CP) — Opposing property owners have blocked a municipal council plan to initiate a huge sewer system without a referendum. A petition signed by 267 residents blocked the $2.3 million project. Council is now expected to prepare a referendum to be placed before voters of the Dec. 12 municipal election.

Drinking Convictions Up Sharply

VANCOUVER (CP) — An increase in traffic accidents and convictions for drinking drivers in British Columbia was predicted Monday by Ray Hadfield, superintendent of the provincial motor vehicles branch.

Addressing the 14th annual convention of the B.C. Safety Council, Hadfield said 420 persons were killed in the first nine months of 1970, a 12-per-cent increase from the same period last year.

In 1969, 542 persons were killed and 22,500 injured.

He said convictions for drinking drivers will increase 50 per cent this year as a result of the use of breath analysis equipment to test drivers suspected of being impaired.

At present rates, there would be more than 10,000 convictions this year. In 1969, there were 6,800 convictions.

"When we find a solution to the problem of driving after drinking, it is well within reason to say that 250 less persons will die each year on our highways."

The number of persons whose records included two or three or more convictions for drinking offences was startling.

"We have taken a very strong line with these people and our policy now is to place them under indefinite suspension."

Dance Profits to Start Newspaper

A youth dance featuring the As Sheriff will be held at the Uvic Commons Block Friday with profits earmarked for a new youth newspaper.

While the newspaper will reflect social opinions of the high school students who produce it, the initiative comes from four Uvic students working together on a four-year social welfare project.

Bob Plewes, Walter Degginger, Neal Chan and Susan Reeson are the university students co-ordinating the high school student effort.

They encouraged high schoolers to launch some project which would give them an outlet for their views on local social issues.

★ ★ ★

The newspaper format is the idea of the 20 or so teenagers from various junior and senior secondary schools in the district who have indicated an interest.

The university students initially visited high schools with the blessing of the school board but objections from some principals brought this to a halt, Plewes and Degginger said Tuesday.

The size and frequency of the newspaper will hinge on how successful efforts to raise money are but it is hoped two or three issues (they will be free) can be published before the end of the year.

Plewes said that as the paper is now envisaged, each edition will centre on one topic. After the high school student organizers have settled on a subject, they will circulate it among their fellow students seeking ideas and contributions.

Sex issues, including possibly abortion and the population explosion, have been proposed as material for the first edition.

★ ★ ★

The university is donating use of the Commons Block for Friday's dance, the first fund-raising venture. Tickets will be sold at the door, $1.25 stag and $2 a couple. The dance will run from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

SINGALONG JUBILEE. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Folk singer John Allan Cameron is the guest star. Regulars include Bill Langstroth, Gene MacLellan, Patricia Ann, Fred McKenna and The Dropouts.

★ ★ ★

THE MEN FROM SHILOH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Lady at the Bar, Greer Garson is the news on this series tonight. It's a rather light story with some heavyweight support for Miss Garson, including E. G. Marhall as the judge and James Whitmore, the bailiff. The case is one of murder, with Trampas the accused and Miss Garson the court-appointed lawyer. She is much the manipulator whose combination of feminine charms and legal knowledge soon has the court working on her side to prove the innocence of her client.

★ ★ ★

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9 p.m., Channel 12. This series has long boasted several superior aspects, one of which is unfortuantely missing tonight: credibility. It has Steve Forrest as an alcoholic surgeon, a category which stops us at the beginning. Further, he refuses to admit to himself or anyone else that his drinking can be a detriment to his work (wow) and finally refuses to accept responsibility when he botches up the treatment of a coed.

★ ★ ★

SPECIAL. 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Hudson's Bay Company. This is an hour of Canadian history saluting the country's early fur trade. It covers the period from 1668 when Raddisson and Groseilliers carried their tales of untold wealth back to England to the present. Chief Dan George assists with the narration.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE 1971 ESCAPADES. 9 p.m., Channel 5. David Janssen hosts this annual ice extravaganza, an all-new production from Atlantic City's famed Convention Hall. Highlights are an extravaganza focusing on The Age of Aquarius and the Age of Love. Among the cardful of top skating stars are Olympic champion Tim Wood, world's free style champion Tommy Litz, Canadian champion Linda Carbonette and Billy Chapel, winner of the International Grand Prix gold medal. The night's feature, as in past years, is the exacting comedy routine of the seemingly ageless king of the ice clowns, Freddie Trenkler. Florence Henderson is the special guest star.

★ ★ ★

THE JOHNNY CASH SHOW. 9 p.m., Channel 4. Burl Ives drops his current dramatic character to demonstrate his singing style again, but not without serious purpose. He sings "Water Isn't Water Anymore" with Johnny and brings up the problem of pollution in America. Also on had are songwriter-singer Melanie, who offers her "Lay Down" and "Peace Will Come," and Bobby Sherman with his current hit, "Julie, Do You Love Me." Tonight's Country Gold award goes to Floyd Cramer and his recording of the classic, "Last Date."

★ ★ ★

DAN AUGUST. 10 p.m., Channel 4. Invitation to Murder. This usually good series falls back on the power-mad journalist plot, and drops down more than somewhat. Tim O'Connor plays the columnist who demands to know how the police could allow such found murdered on a Santa Luis beach. Instead of displaying the emotions of a father, he comes up swinging as the fighting colomnist who demands to know how the police could allow such a thing to happen. Among his other demands is the resignation of Dan August.

★ ★ ★

FOUR-IN-ONE. 10 p.m., Channel 5. International Airport. Lloyd Bridge's melodramatic presentation of an airport manager faced with a top security problem doesn't bother the tight and tense dramatics of this script too much. Robert Webber stars as a controversial general who has long been the target of verbal attacks and is now threatened with physical violence. He must lay over at the airport, but is unwilling to accept the offered security arrangements because of his son, a pacifist. Meanwhile, we are privy to the activities of a lone man, an assassin, whose intentions are more than idle threats.

DONNYBROOK UPSTAGES HORSE RACE

VIENNA (UPI) — Four rival gypsy families fought a private war in front of some 4,000 Viennese who had come to watch a horse race.

The gypsies, fighting with iron sticks and pistols, intruded the fashionable Freudenau race course while quarrelling over best places to sell hand-made carpets, police said.

Ten gypsies had to be hospitalized and 14—including eight women—were arrested.

Rare Finds On Voyage

An 11-month research voyage around North and South America has returned with some marine specimens so rare they have not yet been classified, one of the scientists involved said here Tuesday.

Dr. E. L. Bousfield, chief zoologist at the National Museum of National Sciences, told about 100 persons at University of Victoria the voyage by the research vessel CSS Hudson "exceeded all expectations."

The Hudson, based at the Bedford Institute of Oceanography at Dartmouth, N.S., left Halifax last November. It returned last month.

Bousfield said research in the Cape Horn area off South America was the first major expedition there since the time of Darwin. He showed slides and a film of the area in which the rare marine specimens had been found.

The expedition was sponsored by the marine services branch of the federal energy, mines and resources department. Involved were 130 scientists from various countries.

Condition Improved

Two victims of a head-on crash on the Trans-Canada Highway Monday were reported in improved condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today.

Mrs. Barbara Mattingsley, 41, of 2884 Leigh in Langford, who suffered a broken leg and internal injuries, who was in poor condition Monday, is now in fair condition.

Mrs. Annie Bradley, 70, of 1148 Esquimalt Road, is in fair condition. She suffered a broken leg, jaw, and internal injuries and was also in poor condition Monday.

Arthur Bradley, 69, is in satisfactory condition, and Phillip Mattingsley, 7, was released Tuesday.

Trafficking Penalty High

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver men were sentenced to 15-year prison terms Tuesday and fined $10,000 each after being convicted by the fourth jury they faced on charges of conspiring to traffic in heroin.

Conrad Gunn, 36, and Edward Ponak, 35, were given three years to pay the fines. Failure to pay them will add another three years to their sentences.

They were arrested more than two years ago and were described by police as being the kingpins in a heroin distribution network that spread through the lower mainland.

Two juries were unable to reach a verdict in the case and a third was dismissed following charges of jury tampering.

Be Sure and Save Those Leaves

By HILDA BEASTALL

Small children and young animals show us the way fallen leaves should be enjoyed. Why should the rest of us think of a detached leaf as something untidy? Is there more behind it, an unconscious resentment of the fall season and the inevitable coming of winter?

Hilda

As a sign that our minds are still young in thought we think of several reasons of conserving fallen leaves for future use.

Burning them in smouldering heaps has only one good thing — fragrance of the smoke. If we were curing pork or bacon perhaps the burning could be justified. Otherwise it is like burning our most prized garden component — the soil in which we grow our plants.

Fallen leaves make leafmould when rotted down, and leafmould in time becomes the ideal humusy soil so treasured by gardeners, the kind they are always wanting to buy.

Since we cannot allow fallen leaves to lie on top of our plants during winter we must be busy in the next weeks raking and collecting them into a safe place.

Any bare piece of ground, whether it is between shrubs in a border, the cleared spaces of the vegetable garden, or narrow borders where summer annuals were growing, any of these can be a safe repository for fallen leaves.

You'll need to anchor them from blowing winds. Lay aside a barrow of your good soil. As leaves are dumped, scatter soil over them and for good measure turn the hose on to dampen the soil if rain is not forecast for the immediate future.

A temporary and effective anchor for leaf heaps while still raking when wind is blowing is a sizeable length of one or two-inch mesh chicken wire.

A rock, stone or brick will keep the edges in place, or a heavy piece of wood.

In fact if you don't intend spreading the leaves over bare soil, and are not using them as alternative layers in your compost pile, they can spend the winter under the wire netting.

By the time spring comes, you will feel glad you have them to put under the top inch or so of your planting beds.

Under trees on rough grass and between shrubs on soil, leaves may lie undisturbed all winter. Only remove them from those plants which have living crowns at soil level, or have flat branches to rot away in our wet winters.

Heathers, most alpine plants, horizontal junipers are among those likely to be damaged by wet leaves lying on top. Winter rains, a bit of frost, then a mild spell all mean the leaves begin to decay, causing rot in the plants below.

CYC Will Back Proposed Radio Link

OTTAWA (CP) — An organization largely supported by the Company of Young Canadians will ask approval next month to set up a mobile radio service in northwestern Ontario.

A group known as Kenomadiwin, staffed and supported largely by the CYC, plans a detailed brief in support of its application at a public hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission starting in Winnipeg Nov. 10.

The brief says the area served by the mobile van would include Nipigon, Pays Platt, Gull Bay, McDairmid, Longlac and Aroland in the eastern half of northwestern Ontario.

Each community would be visited once every two weeks for two-day periods. The station Radio Kenomadiwin would broadcast three hours a day, half in English and half in the language of the local Ojibway Indians.

The brief, submitted by C. W. John of Nipigon, a CYC youth and community worker, says the station's aim would be "to provide channels for the development of human resources in the communities in which it works."

The brief says about half the people in the six areas to be served are Indian or Metis. Many are either unemployed or seasonally employed and a great deal of bitterness exists between whites and Indians.

"The station must help to develop a vision of potential development for these communities, including ideas for secondary industry, co-operatives and new uses of natural resources in line with the culture and life style of the people living there."

The new sation would also provide a "safe channel for redress of grievances among Indian and non-Indian communities and among individuals and the agencies which serve them."

It is no longer enough simply to insist on more government action to aid the people of the area, many of whom are dependent on the mining industry for employment, the brief says.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Two partners were arguing over having stopped at a game on a hand where a slam was in the cards. The player who had "quit" despite his partner's slam try, advanced the usual fallacious argument:

"Well, it was the rubber game, and I thought we might as well take our sure profit. A bird in the hand, you know, is worth two in the bush."

His partner (South) looked sorrowfully at the individual score, which showed him to be a heavy loser. "Not," he said, "when you need two birds."

Here is the deal that provoked the argument. Our "complaining" South gave the hand an excellent play to bring home 12 tricks.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♡	Pass
3♡	Pass	4♣	Pass
4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

South's four club rebid was, of course, a slam try: if he were interested in just a game, he would have bid four hearts instead. North, feeling that he had bid his hand to the hilt when he jumped to three hearts, "signed off" at four hearts. South, appreciating that North had passed originally, now decided to settle for the game.

After winning the opening trump lead with his six-spot, South cashed the trump king. Next came a spade to dummy's ace, after which a spade was ruffed. This was followed by the ace and king of clubs. A third club was now ruffed in dummy, and the board's remaining spade was next trumped in the closed hand. Spades had just been eliminated from both the North and South hands.

South's last club was then led, upon which West played his last club, the queen. South did not make the mistake of ruffing this trick. Instead, he discarded the dummy's deuce of diamonds.

West had just become the victim of an end play. If he returned a spade, dummy's next-to-last diamond would be discarded as South ruffed this trick. South's ace of diamonds and dummy's two remaining trumps would then take the last three tricks. And if, instead, West played back a diamond, South's queen of diamonds would become his slam-going trick.

Had declarer ruffed the fourth club lead in dummy, he would have been forced to take the diamond finesse. With the queen losing to West's king, defeat (of the would-be slam) would now be inevitable, since the loss of another diamond trick now couldn't be avoided.

Labor Urges Gaglardi Quit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Delegates attending the annual British Columbia Federation of Labor convention here Tuesday called for the immediate resignation of Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi.

"His performance this past summer has been disgraceful," said a federation report unanimously adopted by the convention.

"The Provincial Alliance of Businessmen is a complete flop and no cooking of the figures will hide that fact," said the report.

"He borrowed the idea from a similar program in the U.S. where many big corporations rushed in to provide training and jobs for the hard core unemployed, principally in the black ghettos.

"When Gaglardi took over the welfare department, he promised among other things, to cut out all the red tape. Instead he not only has increased it, but he has snarled it even more. Employees in the department are completely demoralized and are resigning in droves."

Human Rights Body Claims Youth Hate-Drive Victim

Times Staff

VANCOUVER — "Unscrupulous politicians" are waging a campaign of hate against young people to divert attention from vital issues, the B.C. Federation of Labor's human rights committee reported today.

The committee's report was presented to the BCFL's annual convention at the Bayshore Inn.

It said certain politicans are "playing upon fears to create unreasoning hatred.

"This technique of identifying a scapegoat for all of the community's problems was first used effectively in Germany in the 1930s and has been used in recent years in the United States against black Americans."

INDIAN RIGHTS

The committee, which includes Victoria Labor Council secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan, said the provincial and federal governments have been unable to come to grips with the denial of rights to native Indians.

"Probably the only development during the past year has been the gradual emergence of some younger, militant native Indians who may, in the next few years, lead a more militant campaign of confrontation, comparable to the efforts of black Americans in recent years."

The report said women are without doubt discriminated against on the labor market, and conceded there may even be discrimination within the labor movement.

"It has been pointed out that women themselves make this possible by their reluctance to vote for other women."

ADVERTISING CITED

The advertising industry must bear a major share of the blame for relegating women to an inferior position, the report said.

The committee deplored the appointment of A. W. S. Mortifee as an officer of the B.C. Human Rights Council.

Mortifee refused to recognize five employees who went on strike against one of his local companies, Hi-Fidelity Photos Ltd., 750 Discovery, late in 1968.

The five strikers, members of the Teamsters Union, have since been replaced by nine other employees.

The committee said Mortifee's presence on the council makes "a mockery" of the council's work.

Union Members Urged To Push NDP Policy

VANCOUVER (CP)—A special committee of the British Columbia Federation of Labor calls for more active involvement by trade unionists in the provincial New Democratic Party.

In a report prepared for the federation's annual convention here this week, the committee urges that more local unions affiliate with the party and that an intensive campaign be conducted to appoint political stewards "in every plant, shop and office."

The committee, whose report was expected to be dealt with either today or Thursday by the convention's 400 delegates, also calls for active union support for labor-oriented NDP members.

It suggests that trade unionists seek nominations for elected office wherever possible and proposes that a voluntary fund be built up to support labor candidates in federal and provincial elections.

Provincial NDP leader Dave Barrett has gone on record as being opposed to intensive labor involvement in the party, although the NDP convention in June voted support of trade unions and labor affiliation with the NDP.

Saanich May Expand Fire Calls

Saanich fire committee decided Tuesday night to offer fire alarm emergency service to Central Saanich and View Royal at the same rate which was turned down three years ago.

Indications from a delegation from Central Saanich were that it may be acceptable this time.

Outlying areas with volunteer fire departments — View Royal, Colwood, Langford, Sidney and Central Saanich — had emergency alarms routed through Saanich but they split away in a dispute over costs and made arrangements through telephone answering.

The Central Saanich delegation said it is "not satisfied" with its present arrangements and asked for a price for that municipality as well as what the others could expect.

Five committee members said the rate offered and rejected three years ago — $1,000 per year per area plus $7 per call — is cheap for guaranteed and prompt answering of emergencies at any hour by fire department alarm operators.

Central Saanich had been paying $840 a year. Indications are that the new rate, if it returns, would be around $1,700 a year. Present cost from telephone answering is close to $1,000 a year.

"I think our council might go for it," Ald. Tom Michell said of the Saanich rate. "I think the per-call charge is fair enough."

'U.S. Not Far From Point Of Breaking'

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A Swedish social scientist has warned the United States is "not far from the breaking point" in the widening gap between the rich and the poor.

Dr. Gunnar Myrdal, an economist and sociologist at the University of Stockholm, called on blacks to unite with other minorities to solve what he termed a "poor people problem."

Myrdal told a seminar at Atlanta University:

"It is healthy for a democracy that disadvantaged groups join together to press for justice; otherwise, justice will not be done."

The economist, author of The American Dilemma published in 1944, said American society could be ripped apart not just by a "black problem" but also by the chasm between the affluent majority and the poverty stricken minority.

Homicide Suspected

OROVILLE, Wash. (AP)—Okanogan County Sheriff Fred Horner said Monday homicide is suspected in the discovery of a body identified as Victor L. Basil, 27, of Cache Creek, B.C.

Horner said the body was found in a boxcar by a group of youngsters and there was evidence of multiple injuries. An autopsy has been ordered.

Police Court

Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre Tuesday considered ordering a whipping for four men arrested by Saanich police Friday for possession of guns and ammunition stolen in Oregon.

Two of the men, Mark Davis, 22, of Roseburg, Ore., and Michael McKay, 27, of North Vancouver, also pleaded guilty to two charges of robbery.

McKay was sentenced by St. Jorre to one and a half years for possession of stolen property, and in addition two concurrent two-year terms for robbery.

Davis was sentenced to one year and three months for possession and also received a consecutive term of two concurrent two-year sentences for robbery.

The two pleaded guilty to holding up a gas station at Nanaimo and another at Vancouver while they were armed with hand guns stolen from a war surplus store at Roseburg, Ore.

Garry Letcher, 23, of Kelowna, and James Wooley, 21, of Roseburg, Ore., were each sentenced to one and a half year terms for possession of stolen property over $50.

St. Jorre said during his judgment, "I was considering whether to order whipping" for Davis and McKay on the two robbery convictions, but ruled it out because neither had any record to speak of.

"There must be deterrents," St. Jorre said, because people had to know that if they violate the law they will be "punished."

"This amounts to a virtual gun-running into Canada," the judge said in referring to the possession charge.

WAR ACT

He mentioned the War Measures Act and the recent public order regulations of the federal government, and said the guns brought in from the United Staes could have been sold "on the Vancouver black market."

"Who knows whether they could get into the hands of people for nefarious and illegal practices."

Defence counsel described the quartet as "bungling amateurs" who could not be considered hardened criminals.

"It was really their own stupidity and foolishness that led to their arrest," said Edward Pollard.

ARSENAL

"Yes, they broke the cardinal rule of the criminal—don't draw attention to yourself," St. Jorre agreed.

Three of the men were picked up following a fracas among themselves that broke out in the Red Lion Inn beer parlor and the arsenal of weapons was subsequently found.

Davis turned himself in to Saanich police after telephoning his wife in Roseburg and talking the matter over with a Roman Catholic priest.

St. Jorre gave Davis a lighter sentence because he had been steadily employed, was the father of five children and had no record.

He sentenced her to a $50 fine or 21 days in jail.

DEMOCRATS ENRAGED BY 'SMEAR' CAMPAIGN

By RALPH HARRIS

NEW YORK (Reuter)—One of the few clear results of the most expensive and bombastic off-year election campaign in American history is a deep-running bitterness that will make it harder than ever for President Nixon to govern his divided nation.

Never before in modern times had a president followed such a hard line against his political opponents in an election in which the White House was not at stake—and never had a president enraged them as he did in the last few months.

The returns from Tuesday's election indicate that, while Nixon may have achieved the "ideological" Senate victory he was after, he faces even more trouble from a Democrat-controlled Congress expected to become more volatile and defiant as 1972 draws near.

The election results encouraged Democrats to believe that the president, who won the White House with only 43 per cent of the popular vote in 1968, would be highly vulnerable in 1972, especially if the inflationary economy does not improve.

MONEY FACTOR PREVAILS

The initial impression here was that the electorate was more interested in the status of its pocketbook than in the law-and-order issue which Nixon and Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew hammered home over and over during the campaign.

AGNEW
. . . legacy of rancor

The failure of the Republicans to win control of the upper house was good news for potential Democratic presidential candidates who won Senate seats with impressive majorities.

Although some big-name Democrats were victims of the president's onslaught, others will wield considerable influence in the Senate as they prepare for their march to the White House in two years' time.

The Democratic hopefuls include former vice-president Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who came back to win a Senate seat after two years in the political wilderness following his defeat by Nixon in the 1968 election, and Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, viewed as the leading contender for the party's presidential nomination in 1972. Muskie won re-election with ease.

KENNEDY WINS EASILY

Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who says he won't seek the 1972 Democratic nomination, is nevertheless a possible draft candidate following a blockbuster re-election victory in Massachusetts.

Although far short of the 74.3 per cent he got in 1964, his 60-plus per cent of Tuesday's vote seemed to prove that last year's Mary Jo Kopechne tragedy has been forgotten or forgiven in Massachusetts.

These three men will constitute a powerful force on Capitol Hill, leading some observers to wonder just how effective the "Nixon-look" Senate will be.

MUSKIE
. . . may battle Nixon

Republican leaders felt that, even if they failed to take numerical control of the Senate by knocking off two or three so-called "radical-liberals" and forging an alliance with disenchanted Democratic conservatives they could swing the balance of Senate power in Nixon's favor.

RISKED PRESTIGE

Nixon risked his personal prestige in a massive effort to break Democratic control of the Senate, and the outlook is for continued frustration for the Republican White House despite the strengthening of the conservatives' voice.

One major success the president chalked up was the defeat of liberal Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee, where the Republicans' southern strategy for the presidential election in 1972 met its first practical test.

Gore's defeat encouraged the Republicans to believe they could forge a coalition with southern Democrats who normally would support Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

But the southern strategy failed elsewhere in the South, where Nixon's strenuous campaign failed to produce results.

He made an all-out effort on behalf of senatorial candidates William Cramer in Florida and George Bush in Texas, but both went down to defeat.

Republican losses in the

'Yellow Sub' Joins The Navy

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

VANCOUVER—Canada's navy Tuesday became the first in the world to acquire a submersible that allows divers to work at depths up to 1,000 feet.

In a ceremony aboard the destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie, Rear-Admiral Richard Leir, maritime commander Pacific, dedicated the midget submarine, known officially as SLD-1 (submersible diver lockout) but already dubbed The Yellow Submarine by Leir and his naval associates.

His wife cracked the customary bottle of champagne on the vessel, which stood on an adjacent barge. Her six-man crew headed by Lieut. Barry Ridgewell, stood at attention.

WATCHING PROGRAM

Ridgewell said France is in the process of manufacturing a similar deep-water submersible and the United States and Britain are keeping a close eye on the Canadian navy's newest program.

Built at a cost of $750,000 by International Hydronamics of North Vancouver, the SDL-1, with her unique lockout facilities, will allow divers to leave the vessel and operate at a depth of 1,000 feet. Equipped with external manipulators that can carry out a number of functions, she is operational at a depth of 2,000 feet.

Although normal dives will range between six to eight hours, she is capable of sustaining life aboard for a period of at least 200 hours.

PROTECT SHELF

Leir said the Canadian forces' interest in submersibles is in line with the federal government's determination to protect Canada's sovereignty of her adjacent waters and, particularly, her Continental Shelf.

HIDDEN ARSENAL of machine-guns, revolvers, rifles, dynamite and a bazooka is found by police Tuesday near St. Germain de Kamouraska, about 100 miles northeast of Quebec City, in an abandoned mineral water plant. It was not known if the weapons were hidden by FLQ members.

Police Find Arms Cache; FLQ Suspects Arrested

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Police say they have destroyed a cell of the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec and, in a second raid, Quebec police netted a large cache of weapons.

A newspaper reports that six young people ranging in age from 18 to 23 have been arrested and probably will be charged within two days.

The group, described by one informant as a "communication cell" of the FLQ, is not believed to be connected with the kidnapping of British trade official James Cross and murder of Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

In the arms raid police and soldiers, acting on an anonymous tip, found the weapons in an abandoned mineral water plant on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, northeast of Quebec City.

The arsenal included 20 revolvers, 20 rifles and shotguns, three machine guns, a bazooka, munitions of all kinds and dynamite.

Police said the arsenal was not necessarily a terrorist cache, but might have been assembled by a collector. In addition to modern weapons, it contained helmets and

NOT RUNNING, SAYS KENNEDY

BOSTON (CP) — Senator Edward Kennedy said today he is "committed to service in the U.S. Senate" and flatly rejected the possibility of accepting a Democratic draft for the 1972 presidential race. In a brief victory speech he said:

"I have committed myself to the people of Massachusetts."

Water Board to Open 'Tap' To Save Goldstream Salmon

One hundred million gallons of water will be dumped into Goldstream to enable salmon to swim up the creek to spawn.

The decision to save the salmon, trapped at the mouth of the stream by low water levels, came today at a meeting of municipal officials and representatives of the federal fisheries department and provincial conservation branch.

Mayor Courtney Haddock, admitting the city has been "too timid" in dealing with water problems, said further meetings with government officials would be held to ensure that the problem doesn't occur again.

The water will be put into the stream starting next Tuesday, normal starting date of the Goldstream chum salmon spawn.

UPWARD
. . . wins praise

Unless there are heavy rains, the drop in domestic water supplies could mean a shortage for Greater Victoria consumers by the end of the year.

The mayor said municipalities would appeal to citizens to conserve water by limiting their consumption until reservoir levels are brought up by rain.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford noted that the area's water supply has been hit hard by a third successive dry fall. Last month was the driest October in the region since 1936, according to the Dominion Weather Bureau.

Every drop of water now available — plus substantial rainfall — is needed merely

Democrats Hold Senate, House

Times News Services

Washington — The Democrats held to their numerical domination of both the Senate and House of Representatives for the ninth consecutive election in the United States Tuesday.

They also wrested a majority of state governonships from Republicans.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, speaking early today for President Nixon who campaigned more than any previous president in a mid-term election, claimed Nixon "will have a working majority in the Senate," despite the Democrat gains.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic national chairman, countered that "the president and vice-president would be hard put to call this anything but a Republican defeat."

The thrust of the administration's argument was that with the support of conservative southern Democrats and the Conservative party's James Buckley, elected by traditionally-liberal New York, Nixon would have a freer hand in foreign and defence policy.

★ ★ ★

It appeared the traditional economic appeals of the Democrats worked well against the strong "law-and-order" campaign which Nixon and Agnew waged on an unprecedented level for an off-term election.

Two influential Democrats in the Senate, Albert Gore in Tennessee and Joseph Tydings of Maryland, were defeated. But the Democrats had three of their biggest names back in the Senate and well in contention for the 1972 presidential nomination — Hubert Humphrey in Minnesota, Edward Kennedy in Massachusetts and Edmund Muskie of Maine.

The biggest Republicans among the governors, Ronald Reagan of California and Nelson Rockefeller of New York, swept back into office easily in the two largest states.

But elsewhere, the Republicans fared poorly in the races for state houses.

Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas and Claude Kirk of Florida were unseated by Democrats Dale Bumpers and Reubin Asker. Democrat Patrick Lucey ended six years of Republican rule in Wisconsin and John J. Gilligan won for the Democrats in Ohio.

Against the conservative triumphs, there were victories for liberals, as well.

★ ★ ★

In California, John V. Tunney, son of former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, knocked out right-wing Republican Senator George Murphy. And in Illinois, Adlai E. Stevenson III, son of a two-time Democratic presidential nominee and ambassador to the United Nations, defeated Republican Senator Ralph Tyler Smith.

Stevenson and Tunney, along with newly-elected Gov. Gilligan of Ohio, emerged as leading new national figures for the Democrats.

Segregationist George Wallace was elected with little opposition to a four-year term as governor of Alabama, a position from which he is expected to mount another third-party campaign for the presidency in 1972.

COOL TO VOTE AGE DROP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to lower the voting age were rejected in most of the 15 states where the question was on the ballot Tuesday.

With the vote count incomplete it appeared that Maine and Nebraska approved of lowering the voting age to 20 from 21, Montana and Massachusetts to lower it to 19 and Alaska to drop it to 18 from 19.

But voters in Washington, Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, New Jersey and Minnesota apparently voted against lowering it to 19 and Connecticut, Florida, Michigan and Hawaii voted down proposals for an 18-year-old vote.

The United States Supreme Court agreed to review a federal law passed this year lowering the voting age to 18.

Alma Trio To Perform

Second in the series of Victoria Symphony Artists recitals takes place at 8:30 p.m. today at McPherson Playhouse.

Starred will be the Alma Trio which performed the Beethoven Triple Concerto and Brahms Double Concerto with the orchestra earlier this week.

The ensemble which consists of William Corbett-Jones, pianist, Andor Toth, violinist, and Gabor Rejto, cellist, gets its name from the Alma Estate of Yehudi Menuhin in California, where the trio was formed in 1944.

The all Beethoven program tonight consists of the Trios in E-flat Major, D Major (Ghost) and B-flat (Archduke).

Democrats Oust 12 Republican Governors

WASHINGTON (AP)—In simple numbers, and in states where state house control adds clout for the 1972 presidential drive, it was Democrats nearly all the way Tuesday.

They ousted at least 12 Republicans from governorships, while giving up only two. The turn in Democratic fortunes, after a steady decline in state house occupancy in the 1960s, was the most dramatic development in Tuesday's election.

State houses were at stake in 35 states. Republicans went into the voting with a 32 to 18 edge.

The governorships of California and New York, the biggest trophies in the bag, eluded the Democrats. But they scored important victories in the other big states: Ohio, Florida, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, all previously in Republican hands and all the recipients of campaign visits by President Nixon, Vice-President Spiro T. Angew—or both.

Republicans unseated Democrats only in Connecticut and Tennessee. Both were expected.

SUCCESS UNEXPLAINABLE

It was difficult to explain the Democratic success only in terms of the national campaign themes of the two parties. Local issues and personalities often overrode the Republican law-and-order thrust as well as the economic emphasis of the Democrats.

In early morning, with a few governorships still undecided, the results of Tuesday's elections looked like this:

Democrats: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Kansas, Maryland, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Wisconsin.

Republicans: Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Oregon, Tennessee, Vermont and Wyoming.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, who campaigned in 22 of the 35 states that elected governors, called the election outcome bittersweet. The sweet, he indicated, was what he called the "working majority" the president now has in the Senate with the Republican-southern Democrat coalition.

The bitter, Agnew said, is "seeing so many men I knew well as the governor of Maryland losing in their gubernatorial races.

Among those who lost re-election bids were Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas, Claude Kirk of Florida, Don Samuelson of Idaho, Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma, Norbert Tiemann of Nebraska and Frank Farrar of South Dakota—all Republicans.

TWO WIN EASILY

Republican Nelson A. Rockefeller had no difficulty in winning a fourth four-year term as governor of New York, setting a modern record. Neither did Ronald Reagan of California. Their opponents were Arthur Goldberg, former Supreme Court justice, in New York, and Jess Unruh, former Democratic assembly speaker, in California.

Other Republicans who renewed leases on governors' mansions were Francis Sargent of Massachusetts—a state neither Nixon nor Agnew visited, by request—Walter Peterson of New Hampshire, Deane Davis of Vermont, Robert Ray of Iowa, John Love of Colorado and Stanley Hathaway of Wyoming.

Robert Docking, Kansas' Democratic governor, did what his father couldn't do before him: he was elected to an unprecedented third two-year term in a notably Republican state.

Maryland's Marvin Mandel, a Democrat named governor by the state legislature to fill Agnew's term, easily won election. Democrat John Burns of Hawaii also was re-elected.

So was Preston Smith of Texas, another Democrat who had to withstand a Nixon-Agnew campaign onslaught.

WALLACE RETURNS

Among the new faces in state houses was a familiar one—Alabama's governor of Alabama from 1963 through 1967, had no Republican opposition. But a black challenger, Dr. John Cashin, got about 100,000 votes. Wallace's was at least five times that number as he regained his power base.

In Georgia, Democrat Jimmy Carter followed the ineligible Lester Maddox into the governor's chair, taking Maddox along as lieutenant-governor. Hal Suit, a former television newscaster who had the help of the Nixon-Agnew team, trailed far behind.

Right-Winger Grabs New York

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Right-wing Senator-elect James L. Buckley emerged today as the star of the New York state election, overshadowing such events as Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's trouncing of Arthur Goldberg and the renewal of Republican control of the state legislature.

Rockefeller and his teammates ran pretty much according to form, although the governor's nearly 700,000-vote plurality was larger than expected.

It was Buckley who provided the excitement and suspense in the tallying of Tuesday's votes, bringing electoral triumph to the splinter Conservative party in the U.S. Senate race.

Buckley, an avowed supporter of President Nixon, undoubtedly evoked smiles in the White House by ending the Senate career of incumbent Charles E. Goodell, the unorthodox Liberal Republican who finished last in the three-man race.

Forging in coalition of conservative-minded voters, Buckley produced a narrow minority win over runnerup Richard L. Ottinger, the Democratic congressman who had competed with Goodell for the more liberal majority vote.

The result was an indicated plurality of about 150,000 votes for the 47-year-old businessman, an enrolled Republican who had entered the campaign as a distinct underdog.

Nearly-complete returns gave Buckley 2,250,044 votes, or 39 per cent, Ottinger 2,111,828, or 37 per cent, and Goodell 1,431,374, or 24 per cent.

Meanwhile, Rockefeller rolled to an easy victory over Goldberg, the former U.S. Supreme Court justice and ambassador to the United Nations. Making his first try for elective office, Goldberg was thought to be leading early in the campaign, but Rockefeller finished strong.

In winning an unprecedented year-old governor ran better than ever.

Goldberg also 62, had been rated his toughest opponent, but the governor's plurality far exceeded any he had compiled in his previous victories.

With 98 per cent of the vote counted, Rockefeller had 3,078,893, or 53 per cent, and Goldberg had 2,390,352, or 40 per cent. Conservative party candidate Paul L. Admams finished a distant third, with 417,027, or seven per cent.

VIKING VIEWS

By Mark Hume

The university soccer, rugby, and hockey teams are well into league play now, and all are doing surprisingly well.

The varsity soccer squad, which looked weak in pre-season action, has come on strong and is now holding down second spot in the Victoria and District Soccer League. The Vikings weren't expected to do well this year, as they have only three players back from last seasojn, and were without a coach until one week before their first game.

The rugby Vikings opened their season with a loss, but have gone undefeated in the city league since then.

The real surprise on the rugby scene, however, is the Norsemen. They are presently engaged in a four-way race for first place with the Vikings and two other teams.

Since the Vikings were bombed by UBC two weeks ago they have undergone some minor changes.

Break Dave Smirl has been promoted from the Norsemen to the first team, and Norsemen centre Bruce Panton is now running in the Viking backfield while Gary Johnson nurses a leg injury.

★ ★ ★

The varsity hockey squad is currently holding down first place in its division and is looking stronger with every performance.

The hockey Vikings will start intercollegiate play in a little less than three weeks, when Brandon University comes to Victoria on Nov. 20th.

The Vikings were a little shaky at the start of the season, but are settling down now, and look like they have the potential to become the strongest team Uvic has ever put on the ice.

The Vikings used to practice at 6 in the morning, but players found they had trouble staying awake in class. Athletics director Bob Bell said that because of this new practice times had to be arranged. The squad now works out in the evenings, and are reportedly much happier with the new arrangements.

★ ★ ★

The basketball teams are not into any league play as yet, and will not be for some time.

On Nov. 20th, the men's squad will be in Regina to meet the University of Saskatchewan for their opening game of the WCIAA season.

Viketts, the women's senior team, will be there a week later, to open their season.

The big sports action this weekend will be out of town.

★ ★ ★

The cross-country team, led by Charlie Thorne, who captured the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association 10,000-metre crown last week in Winnipeg, will participate in the National Cross-Country Championships in Edmonton on Saturday.

The Uvic water polo team will travel to Portland to take part in the second annual Small College Water Polo Tournament, to be held there this Friday and Saturday.

THREE-FOR-ONE DEAL SENDS FLOOD TO NATS

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The last technical obstacle in the way of the acquisition of outfielder Curt Flood by the Washington Senators was cleared away Tuesday when baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn approved a straight-player deal with the Philadelphia Phillies. No cash was involved.

The signing of Flood, who still has an anti-trust suit pending in the appeals court challenging baseball's reserve clause, is only a formality and will be announced at a press conference later this month.

In acquiring the 32-year-old outfielder who was idle all last season, the Senators traded outfielder Greg Goossen, 25, first baseman Gene Martin, 23, and right-handed pitcher Jeff Terpko, 20. Goossen and Terpko immediately were assigned to the Phillies' top farm club at Eugene, Ore., in the Pacific Coast League. Martin will stay on the major-league roster.

Canadian Grid Grads NFL's Newest Coaches

By The Canadian Press

Two men who appeared in the Canadian Football League during 1954 were named interim head coaches in the National Football League Tuesday at Boston and New Orleans.

John Mazur, a tailback with British Columbia Lions in their first season under coach Annis Stukus, replaced ailing John Rush at Boston.

J. D. Roberts, an all-America lineman at Oklahoma before joining Hamilton Tiger-Cats, took over from Tom Fears, fired Tuesday by New Orleans Saints.

A statement by Boston Patriots said Rush was being given a leave of absence for health reasons. He was stricken by tachycardia, an increase in the heart beat, just before last Sunday's Buffalo Bills game.

The Bills won 45-10, leaving Boston with a 1-6 won-loss record this season. The Patriots won four and lost 10 under Rush last year, his first with the team.

CHOSE OWN MAN

Patriots president Billy Sullivan, in naming Mazur as interim coach, said "it didn't make sense to go outside the fold" in their search for a new leader.

Mazur, who had previously been an offensive coach with the Bills, was the first assistant hired by Rush when he became Boston's head coach in February, 1969.

Rush, when he heard of his leave of absence, loudly disclaimed the announcement, saying that he had resigned at midnight Monday night.

John Mecom Jr., majority owner of the Saints, announced the elevation of Roberts, who had been coaching the Richmond, Va., team in the Atlantic Coast Football League.

Roberts, an all-American in 1953, spurned offers from Green Bay Packers who selected him in the player draft and joined Hamilton Tiger-Cats, then managed and coached by Carl Voyles.

He was the highest-rated U.S. college graduate to play in the CFL to that time, having been named U.S. college's Lineman of the Year by the wire services and Look magazine.

Coffey, Abendschan Point-Scoring Champs

(Times News Services)

Place-kicker Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan Roughriders and Tommy Joe Coffey, the all-round handyman with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, are the Canadian Football League's 1970 scoring champions.

Abendschan kicked only three converts in Saskatchewan's final game, a 33-13 victory over B.C. Lions. But it was enough to boost his point total to 116, nine more than Ted Gerela of the Lions, his nearest rival in the Western Conference.

Gerela picked up seven points in the game on two field goals and a single, and eased into second place one point ahead of Edmonton Eskimo place-kicker Dave Cutler. Fourth place went to Calgary Stampeder Larry Robinson, far back with 74 points.

ALL-TIME LEADER

Coffey topped the Eastern Conference with 113 points, 13 more than Toronto Argonauts' Don Jonas.

Coffey, completing his 11th season in the Canadian League with Hamilton and Edmonton Eskimos, now has a career total of 847 points on 55 touchdowns, 178 converts, 97 field goals and 48 singles. He is the nation's all-time leading scorer.

Fast-Starting Phil Reaches Milestone

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins has become the 42nd player in National Hockey Leabue history to record more than 500 regular-season points.

But in addition to that feat, Esposito appears to be taking dead aim at his one-season record of 126 points, an all-time NHL high he set two seasons ago.

After Boston's first nine games this season, Esposito has 19 points, including a league leading 12 assists. In the 1968-69 season when he set the 126-point scoring record, Esposito had only four goals, four assists and eight points in the first nine games.

So far the rangy centre from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has picked up at least one point in eight of Boston's nine games. The only time he failed to record a point was Oct. 18 at Vancouver as the Bruins beat the Canucks 5-3.

Esposito leads team-mate John McKenzie by three points in the current scoring race. Another Boston right winger — Ken Hodge — is third with 14 points, two fewer than McKenzie and one more than centre Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens.

Judge Rules Smythe 'Not Treated Fairly'

TORONTO (CP) — A decision by a York County court judge to quash five charges of tax evasion against hockey executive Stafford Smythe could reach the Supreme Court of Canada.

Norman Chalmers, director of the federal justice department's regional office, said Tuesday that in an order for Judge Joseph Kelly to try the case was not obtained from the Ontario Supreme Court or the Ontario Appeal Court, leave might be sought to go to the country's highest court.

Chalmers said he had instructed special prosecutor Joseph Sedgwick to seek "as soon as possible" a mandamus order requiring Judge Kelly to go ahead with the trial which involves the alleged failure to pay income tax on the total of $278,000. He expected the mandamus hearing to be held withing two weeks.

In seeking the order the department will argue that Judge Kelly was "in error" in ruling that the section of the Income Tax Act under which the charges against Smythe were laid was contrary to the Canadian Bill of Rights.

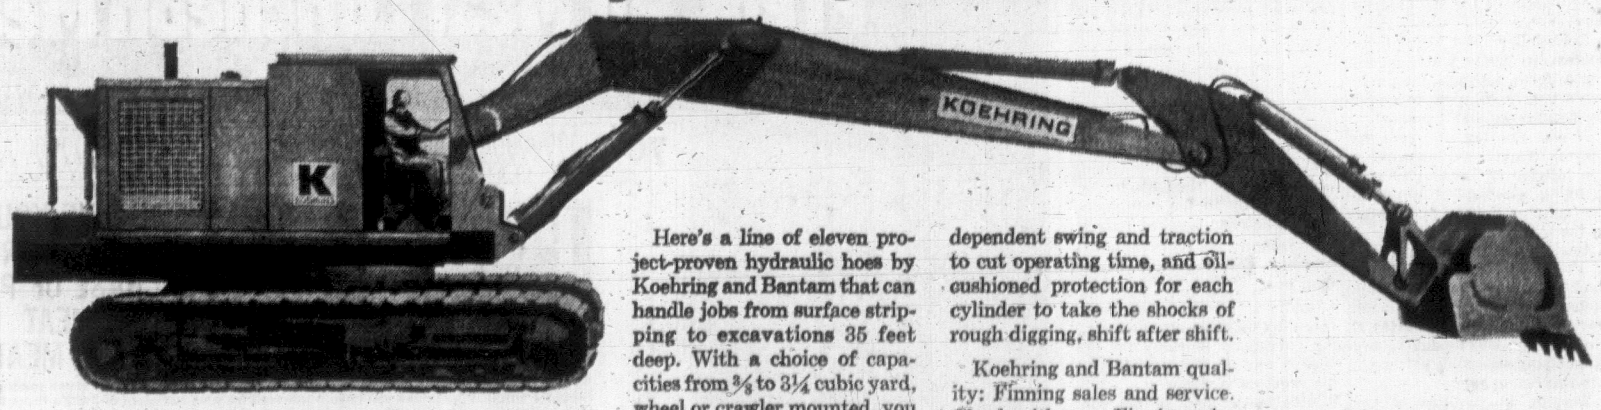

HEADS LEAFS

Smythe, president of Maple Leaf Hockey Cub, is charged with evading payment on income tax between 1965 and 1968 and with making false statements in tax returns covering 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967.

In court Monday Judge Kelly upheld the argument put forward by Smythe's lawyer, J. J. Robinette, that Smythe had not been treated fairly when the justice department proceeded against him by way of indictment — which makes a jail sentence mandatory on conviction — rather than by summary trial in which a fine alone may be imposed on conviction.

Judge Kelly said these sections of the act had the effect of treating one person more harshly than another while the Bill of Rights stated that all persons are equal before the law unless the exclusions are set out.

DEMOCRATS ENRAGED BY 'SMEAR' CAMPAIGN

By RALPH HARRIS

NEW YORK (Reuter)—One of the few clear results of the most expensive and bombastic off-year election campaign in American history is a deep-running bitterness that will make it harder than ever for President Nixon to govern his divided nation.

Never before in modern times had a president followed such a hard line against his political opponents in an election in which the White House was not at stake—and never had a president enraged them as he did in the last few months.

The returns from Tuesday's election indicate that, while Nixon may have achieved the "ideological" Senate victory he was after, he faces even more trouble from a Democratic-controlled Congress expected to become more volatile and defiant as 1972 draws near.

The election results encouraged Democrats to believe that the president, who won the White House with only 43 per cent of the popular vote in 1968, would be highly vulnerable in 1972, especially if the inflationary economy does not improve.

MONEY FACTOR PREVAILS

The initial impression here was that the electorate was more interested in the status of its pocketbook than in the law-and-order issue which Nixon and Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew hammered home over and over during the campaign.

AGNEW
. . . legacy of rancor

The failure of the Republicans to win control of the upper house was good news for potential Democratic presidential candidates who won Senate seats with impressive majorities.

Although some big-name Democrats were victims of the president's onslaught, others will wield considerable influence in the Senate as they prepare for their march to the White House in two years' time.

The Democratic hopefuls include former vice-president Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who came back to win a Senate seat after two years in the political wilderness following his defeat by Nixon in the 1968 election, and Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, viewed as the leading contender for the party's presidential nomination in 1972. Muskie won re-election with ease.

KENNEDY WINS EASILY

Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who says he won't seek the 1972 Democratic nomination, is nevertheless a possible draft candidate following a blockbuster re-election victory in Massachusetts.

Although far short of the 74.3 per cent he got in 1964, his 60-plus per cent of Tuesday's vote seemed to prove that last year's Mary Jo Kopechne tragedy has been forgotten or forgiven in Massachusetts.

These three men will constitute a powerful force on Capitol Hill, leading some observers to wonder just how effective the "Nixon-look" Senate will be.

MUSKIE
. . . may battle Nixon

Republican leaders felt that, even if they failed to take numerical control of the Senate by knocking off two or three so-called "radical-liberals" and forging an alliance with disenchanted Democratic conservatives they could swing the balance of Senate power in Nixon's favor.

RISKED PRESTIGE

Nixon risked his personal prestige in a massive effort to break Democratic control of the Senate, and the outlook is for continued frustration for the Republican White House despite the strengthening of the conservatives' voice.

One major success the president chalked up was the defeat of liberal Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee, where the Republicans' southern strategy for the presidential election in 1972 met its first practical test.

Gore's defeat encouraged the Republicans to believe they could forge a coalition with southern Democrats who normally would support Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

But the southern strategy failed elsewhere in the South, where Nixon's strenuous campaign failed to produce results.

He made an all-out effor on behalf of senatorial candidates William Cramer in Florida and George Bush in Texas, but both went down to defeat.

Republican losses in the

'Yellow Sub' Joins The Navy

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — Canada's navy Tuesday became the first in the world to acquire a submersible that allows divers to work at depths up to 1,000 feet.

In a ceremony aboard the destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie, Rear-Admiral Richard Leir, maritime commander Pacific, dedicated the midget submarine, known officially as SLD-1 (submersible diver lockout) but already dubbed The Yellow Submarine by Leir and his naval associates.

His wife cracked the customary bottle of champagne on the vessel, which stood on an adjacent barge. Her six-man crew headed by Lieut. Barry Ridgewell, stood at attention.

WATCHING PROGRAM

Ridgewell said France is in the process of manufacturing a similar deep-water submersible and the United States and Britain are keeping a close eye on the Canadian navy's newest program.

Built at a cost of $750,000 by International Hydronamics of North Vancouver, the SDL-1, with her unique lockout facilities, will allow divers to leave the vessel and operate at a depth of 1,000 feet. Equipped with external manipulators that can carry out a number of functions, she is operational at a depth of 2,000 feet.

Although normal dives will range between six to eight hours, she is capable of sustaining life aboard for a period of at least 200 hours.

PROTECT SHELF

Leir said the Canadian forces' interest in submersibles is in line with the federal government's determination to protect Canada's sovereignty of her adjacent waters and, particularly, her Continental Shelf.

HIDDEN ARSENAL of machine-guns, revolvers, rifles, dynamite and a bazooka is found by police Tuesday near St. Germain de Kamouraska, about 100 miles northeast of Quebec City, in an abandoned mineral water plant. It was not known if the weapons were hidden by FLQ members.

Police Find Arms Cache; FLQ Suspects Arrested

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Police say they have destroyed a cell of the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec and, in a second raid, netted a large cache of weapons.

A newspaper reports that six young people ranging in age from 18 to 23 have been arrested and probably will be charged within two days.

The group, described by one informant as a "communication cell" of the FLQ, is not believed to be connected with the kidnapping of British trade official James Cross and murder of Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

WATER PLANT

In the arms raid police and soldiers, acting on an anonymous tip, found the weapons in an abandoned mineral water plant on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River.

The arsenal included 20 revolvers, 20 rifles and shotguns, three machineguns, a bazooka, munitions of all kinds and dynamite.

Police said the arsenal was not necessarily a terrorist cache, but might have been assembled by a collector. In addition to modern weapons, it contained helmets and

NOT RUNNING, SAYS KENNEDY

BOSTON (CP) — Senator Edward Kennedy said today he is "committed to service in the U.S. Senate" and flatly rejected the possibility of accepting a Democratic draft for the 1972 presidential race. In a brief victory speech he said:

"I have committed myself to the people of Massachusetts."

'Stay Away From Our Town' Chetwynd Mayor Tells Douglas

CHETWYND (CP) — Mayor Frank Overle has warned national New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas to stay away from this Peace River community.

In an open letter to Mr. Douglas released Tuesday, Mayor Overle said remarks mady by the British Columbia NDP leader, Dave Barrett, had severely damaged the town's civic pride and upset its citizens.

Barrett, he said, described Chetwynd as a community ringed by shacks that could only be duplicated in Mexico.

Overle warned Douglas if he was planning a tour of the Peace River country, to stay away from Chetwynd because it would be hard to guarantee that he would not have to "suffer the consequences."

BARRETT
. . . words spark uproar

A spokesman for Douglas' office in Ottawa said the national leader had no knowledge of Barrett's trip or subsequent statements. The spokesman said Douglas was unlikely to reply to the mayor's warning.

Barrett commented that if the mayor is serious in his concern he will press the Social Credit government of B.C. to provide housing for the people of the north.

He said there was no justification for the poverty he said he saw around northern communities — including Chetwynd.

He added a joking warning for Mayor Overle, saying that Douglas was at one time bantamweight boxing champion of Manitoba and was "well able to take care of himself."

Democrats Hold Senate, House

Times News Services

Washington — The Democrats held to their numerical domination of both the Senate and House of Representatives for the ninth consecutive election in the United States Tuesday.

They also wrested a majority of state governonships from Republicans.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, speaking early today for President Nixon who campaigned more than any previous president in a mid-term election, claimed Nixon "will have a working majority in the Senate," despite the Democrat gains.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic national chairman, countered that "the president and vice-president would be hard put to call this anything but a Republican defeat."

The thrust of the administration's argument was that with the support of conservative southern Democrats and the Conservative party's James Buckley, elected by traditionally-liberal New York, Nixon would have a freer hand in foreign and defence policy.

★ ★ ★

It appeared the traditional economic appeals of the Democrats worked well against the strong "law-and-order" campaign which Nixon and Agnew waged on an unprecedented level for an off-term election.

Two influential Democrats in the Senate, Albert Gore in Tennessee and Joseph Tydings of Maryland, were defeated. But the Democrats had three of their biggest names back in the Senate and well in contention for the 1972 presidential nomination — Hubert Humphrey in Minnesota, Edward Kennedy in Massachusetts and Edmund Muskie of Maine.

The biggest Republicans among the governors, Ronald Reagan of California and Nelson Rockefeller of New York, swept back into office easily in the two largest states.

But elsewhere, the Republicans fared poorly in the races for state houses.

Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas and Claude Kirk of Florida were unseated by Democrats Dale Bumpers and Reubin Asker. Democrat Patrick Lucey ended six years of Republican rule in Wisconsin and John J. Gilligan won for the Democrats in Ohio.

Against the conservative triumphs, there were victories for liberals, as well.

★ ★ ★

In California, John V. Tunney, son of former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, knocked out right-wing Republican Senator George Murphy. And in Illinois, Adlai E. Stevenson III, son of a two-time Democratic presidential nominee and ambassador to the United Nations, defeated Republican Senator Ralph Tyler Smith.

Stevenson and Tunney, along with newly-elected Gov. Gilligan of Ohio, emerged as leading new national figures for the Democrats.

Segregationist George Wallace was elected with little opposition to a four-year term as governor of Alabama, a position from which he is expected to mount another third-party campaign for the presidency in 1972.

COOL TO VOTE AGE DROP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to lower the voting age were rejected in most of the 15 states were the question was on the ballot Tuesday.

With the vote count incomplete it appeared that Maine and Nebraska approved of lowering the voting age to 20 from 21, Montana and Massachusetts to lower it to 19 and Alaska to drop it to 18 from 19.

But voters in Washington, Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, New Jersey and Minnesota apparently voted against lowering it to 19 and Connecticut, Florida, Michigan and Hawaii voted down proposals for an 18-year-old vote.

The United States Supreme Court agreed to review a federal law passed this year lowering the voting age to 18.

Bit of Old England Inside All Citizens?

Inside every Victoria citizne there is a monocled, Ascot-hatted, 19th Century little bit of oLD England trying to get out.

This is what the area's Chambers of Commerce hope, anyway.

SPORTS INCLUDED

The event is to be called Victorian Days Festival, and will include cultural and sports events, and a "magnificent" parade, the whole event embellished with the 19th Century theme and atmosphere for which Victoria is known.

While not strictly designed as "tourist flypaper," organizers hope to parallel such events as the Calgary Stampede.

The Ascot hats and monocles that locals should wear during this festival, therefore, will be Victoria's answer to the 10-gallon Stetson.

One of the orgamizers, Peter Tredgett, explained the festival aspirations Tuesday to the Interm unicipal Committee, saying "the main purpose of this community partiipation is to enthuse the population again into rekindling the 'Little bit of old England' atmosphere that is expected to prevail in Victoria and distri t."

NOT AFTER MONEY

Committee members seemed a little shaken when Tredgett told them he was not here to ask for money, that local service clubs are so far carrying the load.

"We will look to everybody, young and old, to co-operate with whole-hearted enthusiasm. To be successful, this must be a fkn thing."

He will ask Victoria city hall today to declare into existence the Loyal Order of Victorian Enthisiasts.

The initials L.O.V.E. are no accident, said Tredgett. He hopes the word will get attention from the younger set.

The mayor will be named Lord Mayor, and there will be Knights and Ladies, and Barons instead of aldermen.

What will Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay be called?

How about "Lady of L.O.V.E.," suggested Tredgett.

Horses Doped At Hazel Park

HAZEL PARK, Mich. (AP) — The final race at Hazel Park Race Track was cancelled Monday when authorities reported four of the scheduled seven thoroughbred horses were found to have been tranquilized.

Michigan Racing Commissioner Leo Shirley ordered an immediate investigation, with tests to be conducted on all horses.

Unusual actions of the horses were noted Monday morning. Doctors examined and reported the four horses had their eyes dilated and lumps on their necks, where needles apparently had been injected.

The four horses were in separate barns in the area.

Authorities reported no immediate leads.

The case was similar to one in Greenwood Raceway in Totonto last Friday when four of eight horses were scratched from the fifth race. Track officials said the horses appeared to be drugged. Needle marks were found on some of the horses.

MacKenzie Joins Loggers

VANCOUVER — Jack MacKenzie, who was defeated recently in a bid to become regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, has accepted an offer to become business agent of the 4,500-member loggers local in Vancouver.

MacKenzie quit his post as regional vice-president to challenge incumbent Jack Moore for the presidency.

In the election which was completed last week, however, Moore was returned for a fifth two-year term.

MacKenzie said he turned down other job offers because he wanted to stay with the IWA. He was president of the Victoria local for 12 years before going to Vancouver eight years ago as regional first vice-president.

Pa Presse says the six arrested made statements to police about their own cell, but they did not know any members of other cells.

HELD OFF

In Ottawa Tuesday Prime Minister Trudeau said the government held off implementation of the War Measures Act for five days after it was requested by the Quebec government.

He was answering charges that the federal government encouraged Quebec and the city of Montreal to request the act be invoked.

Trudeau said Premier Bourassa made the request Oct. 11 but that Ottawa refrained from taking action until Oct. 16 in hopes the police would be able to find the terrorist kidnappers of Laporte, later strangled, and Cross.

COULDN'T WAIT

The prime minister said the act was invoked because responsible men believed an insurrection was under way and the government "couldn't wait until 500 people were shot in the street" before moving.

In Quebec City, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said some of the 81 persons still in custody under the War Measures Act will face criminal charges by the end of the week.

He told a news conference lawyers for the justice department are still examining the files of those detained and preparing charges against some of them.

Asked whether charges of treason or sedition would be laid, Choquette said he is not excluding any kind of charge.

In Montreal, police said they continue to "draw blanks" in their investigation of the Laporte assassination and Cross kidnapping.

Police spokesmen in Ottawa, meanwhile, warned that the current lull in FLQ terrorist activity "is only the quiet before the storm."

Green Light Given Bids On Burns Unit

St. Joseph's Hospital has been given permission to call tenders for building a special burns treatment unit.

The unit, in the planning stages for several years, will be the only one in the area. It is to be named after the late A. W. Toone, former mayor of Victoria and secretary of the Victoria Labor Council.

A fund drive has raised $27,000 toward the estimated $56,000 cost with contributions coming from the city of Victoria, trade unions and private companies as well as individuals.

Rest of the cost of the unit will come from the provincial government.

N. Saanich Cautious Over Pool

North Saanich wants more details before agreeing to endorse a suggestion that it and Sidney should have a $75,000 swimming pool as a centennial project.

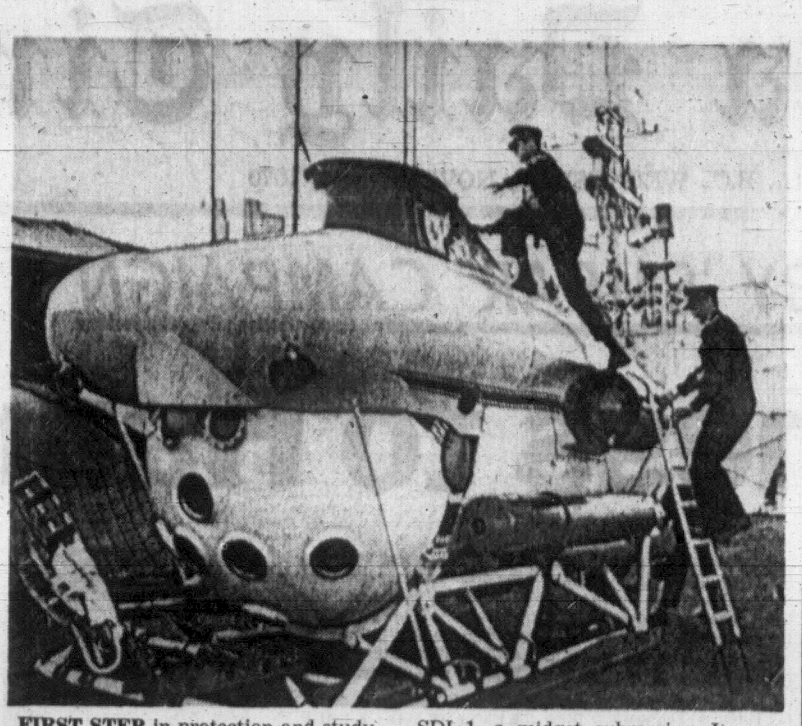

Finance committee chairman Ald. G. O. Cumpston will look into the latest proposal and report back to council.

Mayor J. B. Cumming said North Saanich has given approval in principle to the idea, but wants the details spelled out before final approval and wants no cost to the taxpayer without referendum.

Ald. Trevor Davis said the pool project should be put in its proper perspective. The two municipalities have about $7,500 for a Centennial project and he suggested just that amount of money be spent.

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — At least 4,000 persons have been arrested in a roundup of suspected radicals aimed at heading off possible violence on the first anniversary of the death of Communist leader Carlos Marigsela, press reports said today.

Shelf is equivalent to 40 per cent of our land or about 1.5 million square miles. The potential mineral and marine life resources here are so enormous that it is impossible to estimate their magnitude.

"If we do not show ourselves willing and able to exercise meaningful control through study of these contingent sea areas, then we will forego our right to harvest them.

"We do not know what ecological damage is being done to the seabed by the use of modern super trawlers. We do not know what damage is being done to our fish resources by off-shore drilling operations. This new submersible will help answer these quastions."

On Oct. 17, 1969, Vice-Admiral J. C. O'Brien, then commander of maritime command, recommended that two submersibles be added to Canada's arsenal.

Leir said Tuesday he hopes more will be built and that at least one of them be assigned to the West Coast.

The SDL-1 will continue working-up trails until mid-November when she will be flown to the east coast and operate out of Halifax.

Ridgewell led a team of navy divers that carried out 21 scientific lockout dives from a submarine this summer for the east coast's Bedford Institute of Oceanography.

Bus Drivers In Dispute

Provincial mediator Gus Leonidas will enter a dispute between B.C. Hydro and the Amalgamated Transit Union, union secretary Preston Storey announced Tuesday.

The union represents some 200 bus drivers in Victoria and about 1,300 in the Greater Vancouver area.

The contract between the union and Hydro expired Sunday. Both parties applied for the services of a provincial mediator.

Details of wage demands and offers, have not been made public.

Horse Keeps Record Clean

MELBOURNE (AP) — The five-year-old gelding Baghdad Note maintained New Zealand's great record in Australia's greatest race when he won the 110th running of the Melbourne Cup at Flemington race course Tuesday.

Baghdad Note beat another five-year-old gelding, Vansittart, by three-quarters of length with a three-year-old colt, Clear Prince, a half head away in third place.

Baghdad Note, ridden by New Zealand jockey E. J. Midge Didham carrying 119 pounds, covered the two miles in 3:19.7, only one second outside the race record.

Democrat Upsets Alaska's Miller

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Former governor William A. Egan, a Democrat who called for a new direction for his oil-rich state, narrowly defeated incumbent Republican Keith Miller in Tuesday's governorship election in Alaska.

Egan posted 32,824 votes to Miller's 29,875 with 306 of 407 precincts counted unofficially. Miller was secretary of state under former governor Walter Hickel, but under Alaska law he automatically became governor after Hickel was confirmed by the U.S. Senate as secretary of the interior.

NO COMMENT ON DISPUTE AT HOSPITALS

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said today he will have "something to say" before the weekend about a threatened strike of the International Union of Operating Engineers against 28 B.C. hospitals.

Peterson, rushing off to a speaking engagement at noon, was asked whether the government would tolerate a work stoppage at the hospitals.

"I'll have something to say on that before Friday," he said, after being told that the union has warned it may be on strike by then.

governorship races in the South and elsewhere also put the president's opponents in a better position for 1972, with Democrats tightening their grip on patronage and influence important in a presidential election year.

In Congress, Democrats clearly had reason to be pleased at the results despite their losses in the Senate and their small gains in the House.

They blocked the most intensive and determined drive launched by one of the most politically shrewd Republican presidents they have ever faced in a mid-term election campaign.

The president and Agnew conducted their campaign on the single issue of defeating liberals they linked with violence, drugs, pornography and violent dissent.

The Democrats met the onslaught by claiming they were the victims of a smear and fear campaign, by playing on the fear of the electorate over inflation and rising unemployment, and by calling the president a liar.

The almost photo-finish result appeared to indicate that each party had convinced its own supporters of the arguments it had made but had not managed to attract too many defectors to its side.

FONDA GETS JURY TRIAL

CLEVELAND (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda pleaded not guilty today in Municipal Court to a charge of assaulting a policeman during a hassle over her arrest on a charge of smuggling pills from Canada.

She asked for a jury trial, which was set for Jan. 6 by Judge Edward Feighan, who continued her $500 surety bond.

The 32-year-old wife of French film director Roger Vadim was released on $5,000 personal bond Tuesday on federal charges of fraudulently bringing stimulants and tranquilizers into the United States from Canada.

'Mouth To Beak' Rescue

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto office workers are using mouth-to-beak resuscitation to revive birds which crash against the 740-foot-high Toronto Dominion Centre.

Leon Ozols and Mrs. Mirdza Malins, who work for Dupont of Canada at the centre, say they have revived about 100 birds which they have found at the bases of the centre's two towers.

"About 90 per cent of the birds that fly into the glass during the night are not dead—only stunned into a coma," said Mr. Ozols.

"All they need is someone to blow gently into their beak to give them oxygen and time to recuperate."

Centre officials estimate that 4,500 birds are killed each year.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A soccer player is suing an opponent for $50,000, contending the opponent bit off his nose at an amateur soccer game.

Charred Hole All That Remains of Townhouse Complex

Builders Suspect Arson

By STEVE HUME

Arson is suspected as the cause of a fire that demolished a complex of townhouses at an unfinished construction site in the Gordon Head area of Saanich Tuesday night.

Although Saanich fire officials declined to comment this morning prior to completion of an investigation, a spokesman for the construction company building the townhouse apartments discounted other possible causes.

"The fellow who owns it says it had to be set," Saanich Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland said, "but the building was completely demolished—that makes it pretty difficult for us."

Police were investigating a report that a car raced away from the scene as the first people arrived at the fire.

Karl Fritz of Wigmar Construction offered a $1,000 reward for information about the fire that would solve the mystery.

The blaze, which was first reported shortly after 1 a.m., soon became an inferno attended until 3:30 a.m. by four trucks and 20 firemen from Saanich, Victoria and Oak Bay.

The fire tied up all Saanich firemen, and Oak Bay fire crews who were also responding to the blaze were rerouted to handle another fire which broke out at 593 Linnet Lane in Saanich.

Chief Bill Pearson of Oak Bay said he had to call in four off-duty firemen to man the Oak Bay station.

Victoria Fire Department supplied a pumper truck and four men from the Burnside Station, said Deputy Chief Carl Coates.

It is standard procedure for Greater Victoria fire-fighting organizations to provide automatic back-up and assistance when a major fire ties up all of one municipality's men and equipment.

Damage Estimate Not Yet Made

Saanich fire officials, who opened an investigation into the blaze this morning, declined to make an estimate of damage in the fire.

It was too complex a loss for an off-the-cuff rough estimate, said one official.

The buildings affected, part of a project known as Gordon Head Townhouses which is reached via Blair and Laval from Shelbourne Street, were the second phase of the town house project.

About 12 units were caught by the fire.

Fritz said that of the 60 units, half were 70 per cent complete and the other half 30 per cent complete.

He said some $150,000 worth of heavy equipment was quickly shifted from the danger area.

The blaze also threatened residential houses in the neighborhood, and police evacuated some families early in the fire.

One telephone pole supplying power to the houses on the north side of Laval was burned down.

And a lucky shift of the wind prevented houses in the area from being damaged by the fire.

Officials said only the fact that the wind had shifted to the north, not the prevailing pattern in the area, protected houses on Laval from serious damage.

The town house project was fully insured.

FOR SOME AN EARLY BOXING DAY

Municipal employees in Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt will have the day off Dec. 24 in lieu of Boxing Day, which falls on Saturday this year.

Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee was told Tuesday contracts in the three municipalities stipulate that an alternative day off must be granted when a holiday falls on a Saturday or Sunday.

There is no similar clause in the contract covering Saanich employees.

Youth Week Starts Monday

Youth Appreciation Week in British Columbia begins Monday and continues until Nov. 15.

A cabinet order Tuesday said the proclamation recognizes the achievements of the young people of the province and also seeks to encourage the further endeavors of youth.

THE FAMILIES GO THROUGH HELL

Each Day, in Quiet Victoria, 5,000 Get Drunk

More than 5,000 people in Greater Victoria get drunk every day.

There are an estimated 3,000 alcoholics in the area, and a further 2,000 residents are endangering their health by drinking excessively.

There are about 500 familes on welfare as a result of alcohol problems. Every day they and other families go through hell because of an alcoholic mother or father.

Those figures were produced this week by the Alcohol Problems Priority Committee, formed last April by community groups concerned about drinking abuse.

The committee included representatives of Alcoholics Anonymous, the Alano Club (social arm of A.A.), Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism, Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., Lower Island Association for the Recovery of Alcoholics, Salvation Army, medical profession and concerned individuals.

Excessive drinking and alcoholism, the committee found, had become a permanent part of Canadian society. In the United States authorities rate alcoholism as the third most dangerous public health hazard.

Last year the B.C. government realized net earnings in excess of $60 million from the sale of alcohol, but the need for treatment facilities for alcoholics has not generally been recognized.

★ ★ ★

As a result of the findings of the Alcohol Problems Priority Committee, the Greater Victoria Alcoholism Association will sponsor a two-day workshop on prevention Nov. 25 and 26 at the First United Church Fellowship Hall, 932 Balmoral.

The GVAA says Victoria needs a 20-bed detoxication centre as part of a general hospital.

The group is also calling for establishment of a metropolitan public health agency to treat and prevent all drug dependencies, including alcoholism, and to co-ordinate the work of other groups working with drug problems.

Other facts about alcohol abuse:

- Annual expenditure on liquor in Greater Victoria is estimated at $20 million, not much less than the combined revenues of the four municipalities;
- The average drinking couple spends about $45 a month on alcoholic beverages;
- In 1969 16 people were killed and 480 seriously injured in traffic accidents where alcohol was a factor;
- Fifteen per cent of hospital beds are occupied by problem drinkers, and 20 per cent of the patients admitted to psychiatric units have drinking problems.
- Getting drunk is part of the graduation ceremonies of a large percentage of high school students.

UBCM Urges Cash Controls On Transients After Welfare

The Union of B.C. Municipalities has pinned a large part of the blame for this year's increase in welfare costs on transients.

The UBCM's official position was to be put before Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi today.

The position paper asks for a reduction in the municipal share of welfare costs to 10 per cent from the current 20 per cent. An alternative would be to raise the municipal per capita grant by $3.

The UBCM has also defined "transient" and proposed methods of controlling the amount of welfare money given to this sector of the welfare receiving population.

INSTEAD, HOSTELS

A transient, according to the UBCM, should receive no cash allowances, but that hostels "properly controlled and supervised," should be provided by the province at a number of locations in the Lower Mainland and elsewhere.

Transients are defined as persons away from their normal residence who are applying for assistance.

Normal residence would be interpreted to mean the parent's home in the case of persons, male and female, under 25 years of age. For the over-25s, residence would be where they lived during their last employment.

SEPARATE

The paper says that the UBCM believes a "very significant portion of the rapidly escalating number of social assistance cases in B.C. this year can be attributed to the large influx of unemployed employable transients as well as to the difficult economic situation . . . in the province."

The transient hostels set up by the government would include tents in the summer months "away from the city centres" and male and female camps would be separated.

"If hostel accommodation is offered to, and is refused by, applicants, no alternative support is to be given under any circumstances," the paper says.

A cross-checking system of identifying transient welfare applicants should be set up. If any cash is given, it should be limited to only basic shelter and food.

"Overages for rent, clothing, fuel, emergency health aid, etc., will NOT be granted."

The province, the UBCM says, should arrange by contract for emergency hostel accommodation at rooming houses, hotels and charitable institutions to make beds available.

All transient welfare applicants should be required to be registered with Canada Manpower to continue on assistance.

All B.C. applicants under 19 years of age should be given accommodation for 48 hours only.

"Parents to be telephoned or otherwise quickly notified that infant is to be returned to them at their expense," the paper says. "Failure here by the parent would result in a charge being laid under the Protection of Children Act."

Finally, "work projects" such as roads to recreation areas and marinas should be provided for unemployed employables.

Manslaughter Charge From House Fire

Keith Shepherd, 28, of 558 Sumas, earlier charged with arson, was charged with manslaughter Tuesday before Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre in provincial court.

Bail was set at 2,500.

Shepherd was charged with arson following a fire Aug. 6 in which Fred Dewhirst, 82, was killed by a fall from the third storey of a burning house on Michigan Street.

Hospital Strike Saturday?

Operating engineers at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals may go on strike Saturday.

Local hospital spokesmen have said earlier they will use supervisory personnel to keep the steam and refrigeration equipment running. But picket lines could hamper operations if other union members refuse to cross them.

The International Union of Operating Engineers received a mediation officer's report this morning, leaving the union free to strike after 72 hours.

International representative Ed Callan said he has called a meeting of representatives from the 28 hospitals involved, to be held in Vancouver Thursday at 5 p.m.

Strategy already decided upon will be outlined then.

"Strike action will be very quick after our meeting tomorrow," Callan said, while declining to say when the engineers would walk off the job.

He did say the engineers would put pickets at all hospital entrances in Victoria.

"We're assured of other trade unions respecting our picket lines."

Crisis Line Under Study

A group of university students is studying the need for a crisis telephone line to help people cope with bad drug trips, to aid lonely and alienated youth and to avert suicide attempts.

Thirty students met Tuesday night at Pacific Drug Dependency Centre to assess the need for the service. After further study, the group will meet again next week to decide whether the line will be set up.

Staff would be volunteer, with the help of psychiatrists, psychologists, doctors and social workers.

Grants May Save Gallery From Need to Cut Staff

The Intermunicipal Committee agreed Tuesday to recommend granting the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria $8,000 to avoid cutting gallery staff.

At its meeting Tuesday afternoon, only Saanich representatives voiced doubts as to whether that municipality would pay its share.

"We just haven't got the money," said Ald. Leslie Passmore. But he voted along with the other municipalities' committee members to recommend they all pay their shares.

A letter from Gallery director Colin Graham said the full deficit facing the gallery is $14,500 but he will attempt to raise the difference of $6,500 by "extraordinary fund-raising efforts."

The gallery's annual meeting last week was told insufficient operating grants could mean eliminating the position of assistant director, held by William Hoare.

The intermunicipal sharing formula apportions $3,200 to Victoria, $3,040 to Saanich, $1,040 to Oak Bay, and $640 to Esquimalt.

In his letter, Graham said other galleries of comparable size receive larger grants than the $12,000 given by the four municipalities this year.

Windsor's received $30,000, London's, $100,000, Oshawa, $50,000, and Sakatoon, $80,000. Burnaby Art Gallery, existing in an old house and without any collection, receives a tax-free grant of $15,000.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IF PARLIAMENTARY debate doesn't stray down too many windy alleys, the heavy hand of the bogeyman War Measures Act will soon be lifted from Canadian necks. That will be a relief, though not necessarily to the prophets and practitioners of violent terrorism, for whom other rods are in pickle.

The situation that caused a tough prime minister to invoke the War Measures Act is far from resolved. Nor will it be, even when the murderers of a provincial cabinet minister and the kidnappers of a British trade commissioner are brought to trial. A final solution of Quebec's troubles may be arrived at somehow and sometime — though I doubt that any of us here present will be around to hail the day.

That's not to say we can't be grateful for small mercies, of which I rate Justice Minister Turner's bill for a Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act as one.

When it's passed, the non-violent dissenter should be able to breathe somewhat easier.

Meanwhile, it's interesting to note Canadian reactions as they surfaced during recent weeks of life under a formidable piece of legislation which should soon be returned to storage.

If local attitudes offer a reasonably accurate barometer, the vast majority of Canadians took the imposition of the War Measures Act very calmly indeed.

Most of those I've talked with regard any threat to their civil librties as largely hypothetical. Their feeling can be summarized more or less like this:

"Trudeau did what needed doing with the only adequate instrument then available."

"Government becomes pointless if those elected to govern shrink from doing so."

"We don't pretend to like the War Measures Act, but we like what's been happening in Quebec a lot less."

In sum, I find these sturdy views. They are neither lethargic nor hysterical — merely the responses of men and women not easily spooked.

My own feeling is that the middle-of-the-road Canadian deserves a good deal of credit for his refusal to snort, shy and show the whites of his eyes when confronted by a worrying situation. He convinces me that in spite of rumors to the contrary, Canada may have a fairly solid future, after all.

There are others who haven't done too badly. I'm not of Conservative Opposition Leader Stanfield's camp, but am willing to give credit where due.

Stanfield may take forever to arrive at an opinion and somewhat longer to express it. Even so, I think he has given us a sound example of how a party leader consigned to a watchdog role should conduct himself in a time of national stress.

He didn't obstruct for the sake of obstructionism, a move that could have cost his party dear. But he has remained a reasonable critic of government, and for this I respect him.

Although I fail to see him as a future PM, there are worse men to have around than this plain Nova Scotian.

There are, of course, dangers inherent in respressive if temporarily necessary anti-terrorist measures. The chief of these hazards is that such legislation can be misused, or applied with an excess of self-righteous enthusiasm to witch-hunts of one sort or another.

Some of the uses to which a few of our highly vocal but less than thoughtful citizens would turn such measures are nothing less than amazing.

Vancouver's excitable mayor was by no means alone when he wondered aloud if the War Measures Act could be applied to the hippies against whom he appears to hold so monumental a scunner.

Others would bring doom thundering down on the heads of any group they happen to look on with a disapproving eye. This eagerness to grind a hatchet reached its extreme when one rabid phoner-in to a radio show would have the War Measures Act used to squelch another station's electronic music, which she labelled subversive.

Such haters apart, however, Canadians do appear to have taken these weeks in stride. This was a considerable feat: in view of the extreme reluctance of the federal authority to let daylight into the swamp, it becomes nothing less than remarkable.

Although left more in the dark than they liked — and perhaps more than the declared emergency required — the propie of Canada did very well.

DEMOCRATS ENRAGED BY 'SMEAR' CAMPAIGN ****

By RALPH HARRIS

NEW YORK (Reuter)—One of the few clear results of the most expensive and bombastic off-year election campaign in American history is a deep-running bitterness that will make it harder than ever for President Nixon to govern his divided nation.

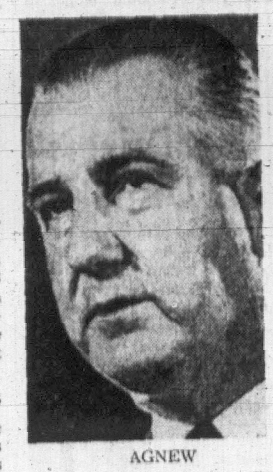

Never before in modern times had a president followed such a hard line against his political opponents in an election in which the White House was not at stake—and never had a president enraged them as he did in the last few months.

The returns from Tuesday's election indicate that, while Nixon may have achieved the "ideological" Senate victory he was after, he faces even more trouble from a Democrat-controlled Congress expected to become more volatile and defiant as 1972 draws near.

The election results encouraged Democrats to believe that the president, who won the White House with only 43 per cent of the popular vote in 1968, would be highly vulnerable in 1972, especially if the inflationary economy does not improve.

MONEY FACTOR PREVAILS

The initial impression here was that the electorate was more interested in the status of its pocketbook than in the law-and-order issue which Nixon and Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew hammered home over and over during the campaign.

AGNEW
. . . legacy of rancor

The failure of the Republicans to win control of the upper house was good news for potential Democratic presidential candidates who won Senate seats with impressive majorities.

Although some big-name Democrats were victims of the president's onslaught, others will wield considerable influence in the Senate as they prepare for their march to the White House in two years' time.

The Democratic hopefuls include former vice-president Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who came back to win a Senate seat after two years in the political wilderness following his defeat by Nixon in the 1968 election, and Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, viewed as the leading contender for the party's presidential nomination in 1972. Muskie won re-election with ease.

KENNEDY WINS EASILY

Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who says he won't seek the 1972 Democratic nomination, is nevertheless a possible draft candidate following a blockbuster re-election victory in Massachusetts.

Although far short of the 74.3 per cent he got in 1964, his 60-plus per cent of Tuesday's vote seemed to prove that last year's Mary Jo Kopechne tragedy has been forgotten or forgiven in Massachusetts.

These three men will constitute a powerful force on Capitol Hill, leading some observers to wonder just how effective the "Nixon-look" Senate will be.

MUSKIE
. . . may battle Nixon

Republican leaders felt that, even if they failed to take numerical control of the Senate by knocking off two or three so-called "radical-liberals" and forging an alliance with disenchanted Democratic conservatives they could swing the balance of Senate power in Nixon's favor.

RISKED PRESTIGE

Nixon risked his personal prestige in a massive effort to break Democratic control of the Senate, and the outlook is for continued frustration for the Republican White House despite the strengthening of the conservatives' voice.

One major success the president chalked up was the defeat of liberal Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee, where the Republicans' southern strategy for the presidential election in 1972 met its first practical test.

Gore's defeat encouraged the Republicans to believe they could forge a coalition with southern Democrats who normally would support Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

But the southern strategy failed elsewhere in the South, where Nixon's strenuous campaign failed to produce results.

He made an all-out effort on behalf of senatorial candidates William Cramer in Florida and George Bush in Texas, but both went down to defeat.

'Yellow Sub' Joins The Navy

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

VANCOUVER—Canada's navy Tuesday became the first in the world to acquire a submersible that allows divers to work at depths up to 1,000 feet.

In a ceremony aboard the destroyer-escort HMCS Mackenzie, Rear-Admiral Richard Leir, maritime commander Pacific, dedicated the midget submarine, known officially as SLD-1 (submersible diver lockout) but already dubbed The Yellow Submarine by Leir and his naval associates.

His wife cracked the customary bottle of champagne on the vessel, which stood on an adjacent barge. Her six-man crew headed by Lieut. Barry Ridgewell, stood at attention.

WATCHING PROGRAM

Ridgewell said France is in the process of manufacturing a similar deep-water submersible and the United States and Britain are keeping a close eye on the Canadian navy's newest program.

Built at a cost of $750,000 by International Hydronamics of North Vancouver, the SDL-1, with her unique lockout facilities, will allow divers to leave the vessel and operate at a depth of 1,000 feet. Equipped with external manipulators that can carry out a number of functions, she is operational at a depth of 2,000 feet.

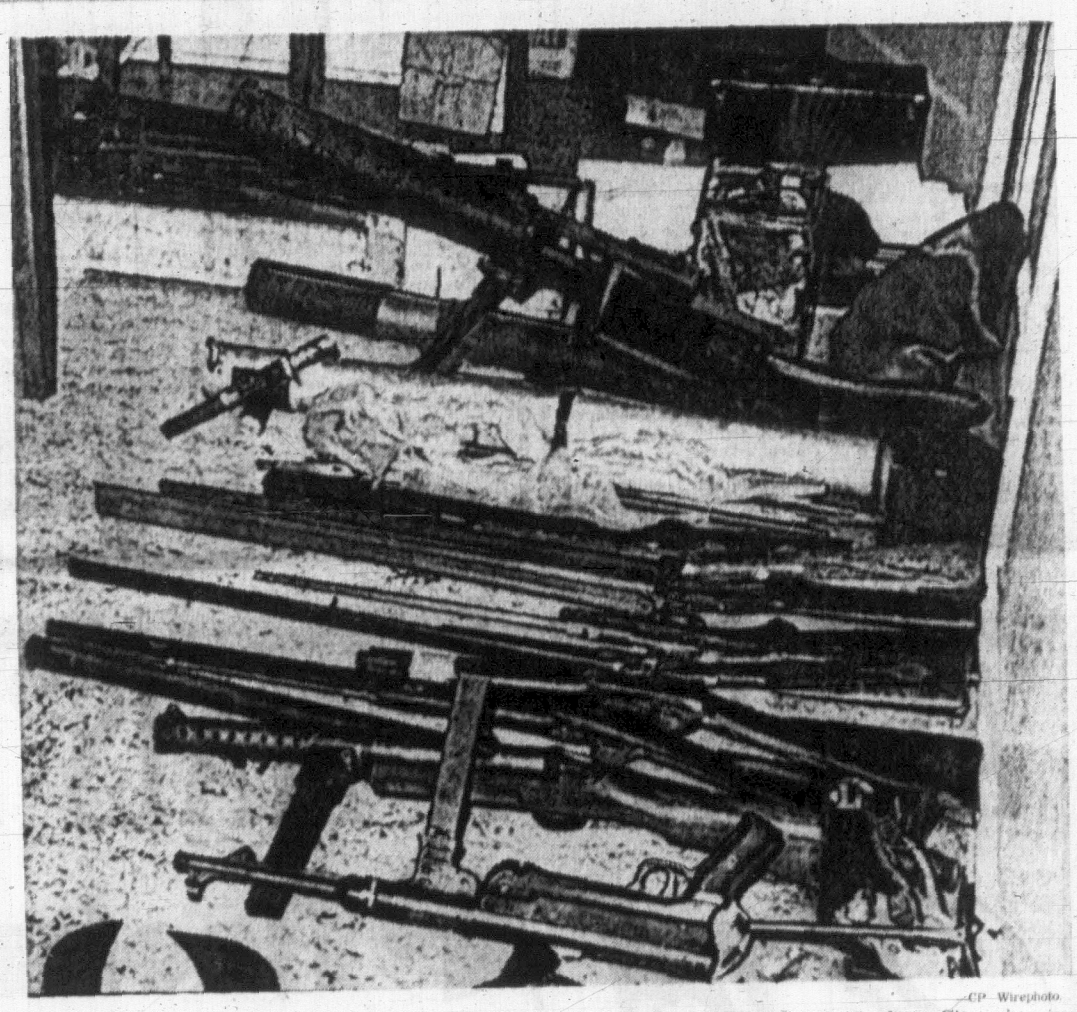

Although normal dives will range between six to eight hours, she is capable of sustaining life aboard for a period of at least 200 hours.

PROTECT SHELF

Leir said the Canadian forces' interest in submersibles is in line with the federal government's determination to protect Canada's sovereignty of her adjacent waters and, particularly, her Continental Shelf.

HIDDEN ARSENAL of machine-guns, revolvers, rifles, dynamite and a bazooka is found by police Tuesday near St. Germain de Kamouraska, about 100 miles northeast of Quebec City, in an abandoned mineral water plant. It was not known if the weapons were hidden by FLQ members.

Police Find Arms Cache; FLQ Suspects Arrested

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Police say they have destroyed a cell of the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec and, in a second raid, Quebec police netted a large cache of weapons.

A newspaper reports that six young people ranging in age from 18 to 23 have been arrested and probably will be charged within two days.

The group, described by one informant as a "communication cell" of the FLQ, is not believed to be connected with the kidnapping of British trade official James Cross and murder of Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

In the arms raid police and soldiers, acting on an anonymous tip, found the weapons in an abandoned mineral water plant on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, northeast of Quebec City.

The arsenal included 20 revolvers, 20 rifles and shotguns, three machine guns, a bazooka, munitions of all kinds and dynamite.

Police said the arsenal was not necessarily a terrorist cache, but might have been assembled by a collector. In addition to modern weapons, it contained helmets and

NOT RUNNING, SAYS KENNEDY

BOSTON (CP) — Senator Edward Kennedy said today he is "committed to service in the U.S. Senate" and flatly rejected the possibility of accepting a Democratic draft for the 1972 presidential race. In a brief victory speech he said:

"I have committed myself to the people of Massachusetts."

Democrats Hold Senate, House

Times News Services

Washington — The Democrats held to their numerical domination of both the Senate and House of Representatives for the ninth consecutive election in the United States Tuesday.

They also wrested a majority of state governonships from Republicans.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, speaking early today for President Nixon who campaigned more than any previous president in a mid-term election, claimed Nixon "will have a working majority in the Senate," despite the Democrat gains.

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Democratic national chairman, countered that "the president and vice-president would be hard put to call this anything but a Republican defeat."

The thrust of the administration's argument was that with the support of conservative southern Democrats and the Conservative party's James Buckley, elected by traditionally-liberal New York, Nixon would have a freer hand in foreign and defence policy.

★ ★ ★

It appeared the traditional economic appeals of the Democrats worked well against the strong "law-and-order" campaign which Nixon and Agnew waged on an unprecedented level for an off-term election.

Two influential Democrats in the Senate, Albert Gore in Tennessee and Joseph Tydings of Maryland, were defeated. But the Democrats had three of their biggest names back in the Senate and well in contention for the 1972 presidential nomination — Hubert Humphrey in Minnesota, Edward Kennedy in Massachusetts and Edmund Muskie of Maine.

The biggest Republicans among the governors, Ronald Reagan of California and Nelson Rockefeller of New York, swept back into office easily in the two largest states.

But elsewhere, the Republicans fared poorly in the races for state houses.

Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas and Claude Kirk of Florida were unseated by Democrats Dale Bumpers and Reubin Asker. Democrat Patrick Lucey ended six years of Republican rule in Wisconsin and John J. Gilligan won for the Democrats in Ohio.

Against the conservative triumphs, there were victories for liberals, as well.

In California, John V. Tunney, son of former heavyweight boxing champion Gene Tunney, knocked out right-wing Republican Senator George Murphy. And in Illinois, Adlai E. Stevenson III, son of a two-time Democratic presidential nominee and ambassador to the United Nations, defeated Republican Senator Ralph Tyler Smith.

Stevenson and Tunney, along with newly-elected Gov. Gilligan of Ohio, emerged as leading new national figures for the Democrats.

Segregationist George Wallace was elected with little opposition to a four-year term as governor of Alabama, a position from which he is expected to mount another third-party campaign for the presidency in 1972.

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The United Nations General Assembly today formally recommended a three-month extension of the standstill ceasefire in the Middle East — scheduled to end Thursday — and also resumption of peace talks.

Water Board to Open 'Tap' To Save Goldstream Salmon

One hundred million gallons of water will be dumped into Goldstream to enable salmon to swim up the creek to spawn.

The decision to save the salmon, trapped at the mouth of the stream by low water levels, came today at a meeting of municipal officials and representatives of the federal fisheries department and provincial conservation branch.

Mayor Courtney Haddock, admitting the city has been "too timid" in dealing with water problems, said further meetings with government officials would be held to ensure that the problem doesn't occur again.

The water will be put into the stream starting next Tuesday, normal starting date of the Goldstream chum salmon spawn.

UPWARD
. . . wins praise

Unless there are heavy rains, the drop in domestic water supplies could mean a shortage for Greater Victoria consumers by the end of the year.

The mayor said municipalities would appeal to citizens to conserve water by limiting their consumption until reservoir levels are brought up by rain.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford noted that the area's water supply has been hit hard by a third successive dry fall. Last month was the driest October in the region since 1936, according to the Dominion Weather Bureau.

Every drop of water now available — plus substantial rainfall — is needed merely

COOL TO VOTE AGE DROP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to lower the voting age were rejected in most of the 15 states where the question was on the ballot Tuesday.

With the vote count incomplete it appeared that Maine and Nebraska approved of lowering the voting age to 20 from 21, Montana and Massachusetts to lower it to 19 and Alaska to drop it to 18 from 19.

But voters in Washington, Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, New Jersey and Minnesota apparently voted against lowering it to 19 and Connecticut, Florida, Michigan and Hawaii voted down proposals for an 18-year-old vote.

The United States Supreme Court agreed to review a federal law passed this year lowering the voting age to 18.
